ARMSTRONG & CLARKE,

MASONIC TEMPLE BLOCK

WILL HOLD THE OPENING OF THEIR NEWLY IMPROVED STORE

THURSDAY, FRIDAY AND SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 12th, 13th AND 14th

PRESERVE THIS PAPER

Partial Retail Catalogue of Fine Groceries Sold at Our Establishment:

Since the opening of our business it has been well known to the people of Toledo and vicinity that if they wanted anything particularly choice in Staple or Fancy Groceries, Foreign or Domestic Fruits, Fine Toilet Goods, Finest Hand-Made Confectionery, Pure Wines and Liquors, and Choicest Brands of Cigars, they could always find it in our store. Our motto is: "Quality First," and we have made it a constant study to buy goods as near the place of production as possible. Buying them in large quantities enables us to offer them to the public as low or lower than is usually charged for medium and inferior grades of goods. Our large volume of trade keeps our stock turning so rapidly that we are always enabled to furnish goods while they are fresh and most desirable. Our system of a strictly cash business eliminates all objection to the expense always attached to credit system, and each and every one of our patrons share in its benefits.

Teas.

Our Teas are the finest grades grown and are selected with the greatest care for fine drawing qualities. Tea epicures pronounce them the flower of the tea gardens of the east.

Special prices by the half chest and five and ten pound caddies.

ARE FOR SHERMAN.

Sentiments of Toledo Bankers and Business Men,

As Against the Fire Alarm From Cincinnati.

Some Peppery Talks by Prominent Republicans,

On the Question Now Agitating the Opposition Fold.

Fully Four Out of Five Advocate Sherman's Re-Election to the Senate—Fun for the Democrats Just Now.

The commercial interests of Toledo are decidedly and decisively in favor of the re-election of John Sherman to the United States senate.

The following interviews, secured without regard to party affiliations or personal preferment, gives a very good idea of the general sentiment of the community:

Geo. W. Davis, president of the Second National bank—Politically I have but little use for John Sherman, but I consider him one of the ablest financiers of the counter. Of the two I much prefer Sherman to Foraker. He is a safe man and just the man that the republicans should send to the United States senate.

W. H. Maher, vice president of the Union Savings bank—Were I in the legislature and called upon to vote for a United States senator, my voice would be for John Sherman. As a republican I think we need the continued presence of Sherman in Washington. His conservative mind keeps him from running to extremes. A man may be a brilliant man on the stump, an aggressive man in partisan politics, yet be a very unwise man as a party leader, and, left to himself, will as often bring defeat as victory to his own side. Senator Sherman has been a bold man in opposing popular fads in finances, and in keeping to the strict line of the fulfillment of the promises of the government. He did this when more "magnetic" men were ready to cater to the popular demand, and he has lived to see his action commended by the men who denounced him then. With Sherman in the senate and Foster in the treasury, Ohio occupies an influential position in the affairs of the nation, and to deprive the state of her position by refusing to re-elect Sherman would be the work of idiocy.

L. S. Baumgardner—Who for Senator? At least 80 per cent. of the republicans of Lucas county plainly say J. B. Foraker. Our senators and representatives elect need not hesitate if they honestly desire to give expression to the will of those whom they were elected to represent. The great importance of a republican legislature and governor made it inexpedient to attempt to register the vote on this question, but the will of the great majority of voters was clearly made known. This, all concede. The old senator will be allowed to retire full of honor and full of years, while his special henchmen seek other avenues to the public crib. No public man has the reputation of sticking closer to his special favorites and looking after his own personal interests than the retiring senator.

James Secor, president of the Union Savings bank—Foraker is a good enough man in his place, but he cannot fill John Sherman's shoes in the United States senate. He is not only the ablest of our republican leaders, but he is a good man for the commercial interests of the country to have in the United States senate. It appears to me there can only be one opinion on this matter, Sherman is the man.

Almon Hall, United States commissioner—At one of Foraker's meetings during the recent campaign, he shouted, "What has the democratic party done for the state of Ohio?" A democrat in the crowd replied, "Beat you for governor twice." The fact that Gov. Foraker was twice defeated for governor, in a state conceded to be largely republican, demonstrates the feeling of the republican party for him. I regard the present flurry in his behalf as simply a "boom" organized by himself and his heelers. Ever since I have known anything of him, he has stood around with a lightning rod on his hat, waiting to be struck. In my judgment there are in Ohio a dozen republicans fully as well equipped and as deserving of the Ohio senatorship as Foraker. Pre-eminent among them is Mr. Sherman, whose biography, as much as that of any man living, is the history of the republican party. To shelve him now, after these long years of public service which have shed luster upon his state, for such a man as Foraker, would simply be contemptible ingratitude.

Clarence Brown—Personal friendship makes me desirous of seeing Mr. Foraker sent to the United States senate. He has been for eight or ten years the leader of his party in the state, and besides he represents the young, live and progressive element of the republicans of Ohio. This idea that the existence of a party depends on one man is not only erroneous, but the assertion if true would betray an unfortunate weakness in our party. I am for Joseph B. Foraker.

H. S. Walbridge, president of the Maumee Rolling Mills company—To be candid with you I think John Sherman is the ablest man in this country. His re-election will not only be heartily indorsed by the people of Lucas county and the state of Ohio, but by the people of the United States. He is the man above all others for the place, and I think you will find this is the opinion of three-fourths of republicans.

Noah H. Swayne—I am decidedly in favor of Mr. Sherman. He is the safest man in financial matters that Ohio republicans can send to Washington.

S. C. Schenck—I am not in politics, but in this matter of a United States senator you can quote me as emphatically as you desire as being in favor of John Sherman.

Mars Nearing, president of the First National—I am not in politics and don't feel like expressing an opinion. Sherman and Foraker are both good men. Sherman is an able financier.

Have you no preference?

I cannot say that I have. Of course, if I was in politics I might have something to say, but as it is I have nothing.

Carl H. Beckham—Who do I favor for United States senator? John Sherman. Senator Sherman is one of the kind of men who, whether they be republicans or democrats, can give consideration to public affairs unbiased by partisan prejudice, and which tends to make the government conservative and for the best interests of the whole people. He is of the class of statesmen who see far into the future in molding the country's policy, and bases his action on fundamental principles and not on partisan prejudice or temporary clamors. And for that reason he has always been right. A man who would always offend those who do not belong to the same party as himself cannot be useful to the nation in the senate or any other deliberative body. Our leading men who are best qualified to succeed Senator Sherman seem to be already well provided for, and hence not seriously considered as candidates for the senate, I mean Foster and McKinley. Charley Foster is pre-eminently the man with qualifications and character fitting him to become another great senator from Ohio, but his place in the treasury could not easily be filled, and I expect to see him there for a term as long as that of senator.

Frank I. King—John Sherman most emphatically. Political fanaticism must give way to the business interests of the country and the best commercial interests of the United States demands the return of John Sherman to the senate.

HE SAVED THE TRAIN.

The B. & O. Has a Narrow Escape from An Accident.

Tiffin, O., Nov. 11.—The high wind which prevailed last night blew a large tree across the Baltimore & Ohio railway track just east of Chicago Junction a few minutes before the arrival of the west bound fast line at 11 o'clock.

A farmer discovered the tree and by means of a bonfire he started on the track, the train was brought to a stand still within a few feet of the obstruction, and another terrible railroad horror prevented.

WHITEHOUSE NOTES.

Whitehouse, O., Nov. 11.—(Special)—The old ladies circle met at Mrs. Root's Tuesday, her 83d birthday. There are three ladies members of the circle who are older than Mrs. Root—Mrs. Cowling 90, Mrs. Dyer 84 and Miss Haskins 88.

K. of P. hall will be dedicated tomorrow.

PROTECTING THE PARTY.

Republican Whitewash on Tap in Harrisburg.

Every Effort Being Made to Hide the Guilt of State Officers Responsible for the Bardsley Steal.

Harrisburg, Pa., Nov. 11.—In the senate Senator Gobin offered a resolution that the senate had no jurisdiction in the matter of charges against the state treasurer and auditor-general, as the constitution provides only two ways of proceeding in such charges, namely, by impeachment or by indictment.

Senator Ross (dem.) offered a substitute appointing a committee to prepare an address to the governor recommending the removal of the officials named.

Gobin raised a point of order and the chair sustained it, against Ross' resolution.

NEW BANK PRESIDENT.

The Northern National Will Probably Have a Change Jan. 1.

The long-continued ill health of President William Cummings of the Northern National bank makes it an apparent necessity that he retire from the active management of the bank, and the Bee has it on reliable authority that a change will be made on Jan. 1.

Several prominent names are mentioned in connection with the presidency, but that of Fred Shoemaker, who has been the real president all summer, is the one, if the directors had their way, would be given the position. He does not want it, however, and may not accept it if offered.

What with the proposed retirement of Mr. Boice of the Merchants, there will be quite a number of changes in banking circles the first of the year in Toledo.

MEMORIAL HALL MEETING

Reception to the Delegates of the General Assembly.

What Is Being Done In the Executive Meetings.

Report of General Master-Workman Powderly and Other Officers—Committees Appointed—Other Business.

The principal business of the K. of L. convention yesterday afternoon was to receive the reports of the general master workman and other officers. This is the usual method of proceeding, as upon the recommendations of these reports is based to a great degree the legislation of the convention. The following is the report of General Master Workman Powderly.

The effects of the work of this Order are felt everywhere; the good that has been done has not been monopolized by a few, it has benefited the masses; and though the fact that the work was done the agitation continued and the results accomplished may not be appreciated by those who are the recipients of the benefits which have been conferred by our efforts, it is very gratifying to realize that in the work of reform no factor has been accorded that recognition that has been given to the Order of the Knights of Labor. To cling to the advantages we have secured and to pave the way for other reforms is the plain duty of the loyal member of this Order. To aid him in the effort and to so shape the legislation of this session as to make the accomplishment of results more easy in future should be our duty here.

It is not in the framing of new laws that our membership will be benefited the most; we should, on the contrary, endeavor to simplify and abbreviate until our constitution would not present so formidable an appearance to the member when scanning its pages in a search for sections or paragraphs bearing on his duties.

Mr. Powderly speaks of the trouble arising from interference by the general body with local affairs, and advises that each local be allowed to enact its own laws. He next takes up the question of politics in the order, and insists that when an officer seeks and secures a nomination for a partisan office, he should resign.

Mr. Powderly's reference to the noted section 343, is as follows:

The general executive board will make a recommendation concerning this particular section of our constitution, and in addition I wish to say that no section in the constitution has worked more good to the order. It has closed the venomous mouth of many an enemy to the order who, sheltering himself beneath the folds of a local assembly, would have stabbed his fellow member to the death through the press or from the rostrum. It was no uncommon thing for the capitalist enemies of the order to cover the itching palm of a member of this order and cause him to openly attack another member through the public press or from the rostrum. Such attacks were always more injurious than if made by one not connected with the order, and the fact of such assailant being a member was always paraded to show that the order was divided. Within our order there is a remedy for grievances, and if our courts do not furnish ample provision for the settling of disputes the aggrieved party should seek an interview with the one who has offended, and through that means obtain relief or satisfaction, rather than through the public press.

Many members believe that when a brother is seeking office they have a right to assail the personal character of that brother, and justify such action on the ground that it is a right of citizenship. It is not the right of a citizen, in or out of the order, to lie about any man who may aspire to office, and having been done in a political campaign does not lessen the offense. The general executive board should be allowed some discretion in the matter of fixing punishment; but the man who is intelligent enough to write a newspaper article attacking a brother is too intelligent to be excused on the ground of ignorance, and, if for no other reason that he has injured the order, he should be allowed to make further attacks from the outside.

Sometimes a member may own the stock of a paper, and through his editor make a covert attack on a brother. The attacked member may be morally certain of the authorship of the assault, but section 343 shields his antagonist as it now reads. The committee on law should frame a section that would embody all of the strong features of the present law and add such words as will enable the general executive board to hear testimony before deciding.

Mr. Powderly gives his approval to the coming industrial conference.

On the question of government ownership of the railroads, he has this to say:

When the order first set forth in its declaration of principles that the government should own and operate the railroads in the interest of the people, as the postoffices are managed and owned, we were ridiculed and laughed at. It is written in the history of every great reform that in its incipient stages laughter, ridicule and silence have been the first weapons wielded in opposition. To be misunderstood has always been the fate of the advocate of reform; to be sneered at and ridiculed has been the lot of the man who raised his voice in defense of new measures that were calculated to benefit the masses. "We erect stones to the memory of the men our fathers stoned." Sometimes the opposition, the ridicule, the laughter and the sneers have had the intended effect, and have driven men from the battlefield of reform or caused them to take up arms in the ranks of the enemy. Our effort has demonstrated that the latter part of the nineteenth century is no exception to the ages that have gone to make up the centuries of the past. But the ridicule has ceased, there is no longer cause for merriment among those who oppose us, silence has been broken, and the fact that our agitation has done its work faithfully is well illustrated in the secret circular recently issued from the center of railway operations of the United States in opposition to the agitation for government ownership of railroads. From a letter before me I quote some of the words of that circular:

It is idle folly to longer ignore the fact, so patent to every railroad manager, that the agrarian agitation for the ownership of the railroads by the government has been prolific of evil. It has drawn the support of some of the ablest men in the nation, it is no longer easily combatted, and it has gone to such lengths that we now find not only the Knights of Labor and farmers' alliances pushing forward the agitation, but men who are stockholders and directors of railroads are becoming converts to the heresy. We can no longer quiescently allow this agitation to proceed. The folly of the proposition must be exposed; the public press must be used to oppose the measure; the best thought we can control must be exercised in defense of the right to own, manage and direct our own property free from the dictation of a government that may be changed every four years, etc., etc.

If there were no other evidence that our work had borne good fruit the fear expressed in that circular would be sufficient to convince us that our aim had not been misdirected. There is cause for congratulation in the words I have quoted, and we should renew our effort to swell the number of converts until they outnumber those in opposition to the rule of the people.

Ballot reform is next discussed. When

How's Your Liver?

Is the Oriental salutation, knowing that good health cannot exist without a healthy Liver. When the Liver is torpid the Bowels are sluggish and constipated, the food lies in the stomach undigested, poisoning the blood; frequent headache ensues; a feeling of lassitude, despondency and nervousness indicate how the whole system is deranged. Simmons Liver Regulator has been the means of restoring more people to health and happiness by giving them a healthy Liver than any agency known on earth. It acts with extraordinary power and efficacy.

NEVER BEEN DISAPPOINTED.

As a general family remedy for dyspepsia, Torpid Liver, Constipation, etc., I hardly ever use anything else, and have never been disappointed in the effect produced; it seems to be almost a perfect cure for all diseases of the Stomach and Bowels.

ARE IN REBELLION.

Interesting News From Far Off Brazil.

Several of the Provinces Discard Fonseca,

And Declare Their Independence of the Dictator.

The Opposition Public Press Has Been Suppressed.

A Feeling of Great Uneasiness Fel in Rio Janeiro and Reports That Troops Are Being Massed To Force Submission From the Seceeders.

London, Nov. 11.—There has still been no official contradiction from Brazil of the reports cabled here from that country to the effect that two or more provinces of that country, certainly the province of Rio Grande do Sul, and possibly those of Pernambuco and Bahia, have seceded.

Of course, with the telegraph and cable offices in the hands of the dictator, and with the strict censorship established over even the most ordinary messages, it is a difficult matter to get the real facts. Some reports, for instance, say that the independent provinces, or rather those which have declared their independence of the dictatorship, are Rio Grande do Sul, Pernambuco and Para. Others add Bahia and omit Pernambuco, but the fact remains that in one or more provinces of Brazil independence has been proclaimed and that more states are likely to follow this example.

The Times publishes a dispatch from Rio de Janeiro saying that, by order of dictator, nearly all the newspapers of that city have been ordered to suspend publication and that their offices are in the hands of the authorities.

The dictator, Marshal Da Fonseca, has, it appears, made exceptions to this rule in favor of the Journal do Comercio, the Novodes and the Correo, which papers have announced themselves in favor of his policy and which supported him editorially and other wise.

This step has not tended to ally the feeling of discontent prevailing at Rio Janeiro and elsewhere in Brazil, and the rumors which have reached here this morning indicate that important movements or concentrations of troops are in progress and that the dictator has determined to take the most rigorous measures to suppress the movement in opposition to his power.

So far, also, there has been no denial of the report that there has been more or less fighting, probably in the province of Rio Grande do Sul.

It is almost useless to add that the explicit details as to the state of affairs in Brazil are anxiously awaited here where so many financiers and merchants have important Brazilian interests.

The supporters of the dictator are known to be urging him to remain in power in spite of any combination which may be formed against him and to use every man in the army and navy to make his government respected throughout Brazil.

QUEEN VICTORIA'S FAMILY.

Queen Victoria has a large family. There are, besides her own children, 40 grandchildren and a rapidly increasing progeny of great-grandchildren. Here are the grandchildren up to date: Emperor William, Princess Charlotte, Prince Albert William Henry, Prince Sigismund, Princess Victoria, Prince Waldemar, Princess Frederika, Princess Sophia and the Princess Margaret, all belonging to the Empress Frederick.

The Prince of Wales has five children, Albert Victor, George, Louise Victoria, Victoria and Maud.

The Princess Christian has achieved Victoria, Elizabeth, Irene, Ernest, Frederick, Alix and Mary.

The Duke of Edinborough is quite in the shade with only five, namely, Alfred, Marie, Victoria, Alexander, Beatrice.

The Princess Christian has achieved only five. They are named Christian, Albert John, Victoria, Louise Augusta and Harold.

The Duke of Connaught has three, Margaret, Arthur and Victoria.

Alice Mary and Leopold are children of the Duke of Albany.

The Princess Beatrice, dearly beloved of her mother, has four children, Albert Alexander, Leopold Arthur, Victoria and a new little prince that has just flapped its wings above Balmoral castle.

EXACTLY WHY.

After he had congratulated his old chum and wished him all the luck in the world, he said:

"By the way, you were married by a woman, weren't you?"

"Yes—the Rev. Isabel Dixon."

"Oh, well, of course, it's all right, but it seems sort of strange."

"It's just as binding as it would be if the ceremony was performed by a man."

"I know it, but I don't believe I could get used to it. The bride's idea, I suppose?"

"No; mine."

"Yours! Good heavens, man! I should have thought you—"

"Well, I did at first. I preferred a man, and we had one all picked out, but the bride and her parents rather favored some old customs that I combated unsuccessfully."

"Such as what?"

"Such as letting the minister kiss the bride."

"Oh! that's why you—"

"That's exactly why."—Chicago Tribune.

RUGS AND CARPETS.

To be sure, a large rug costs more than a carpet for the same room; but it is certainly cheaper in the end, and it will last a lifetime. Those who really cannot afford such a purchase can have carpeting made into a rug with quite the effect of one piece. It should be finished with a border, and if the corners are inclined to curl they should be weighted and lined with burlaps for a short distance. A velvet rug made in this way may be so perfectly matched and sewed that it will be impossible to detect the seams. If the floor is suitable, several small rugs may be used, though the effect is not so good.—Good Housekeeping.

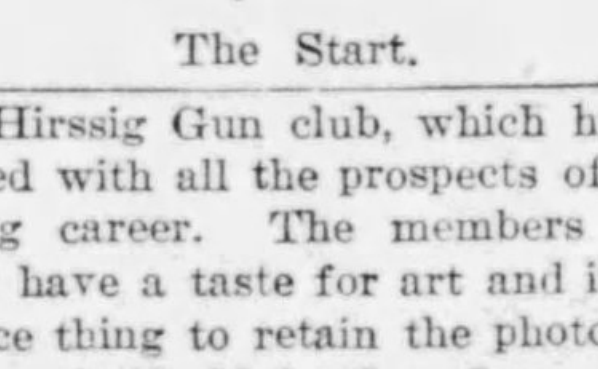
THE TALE OF A DOG,

Or An Outing by the Hirssig Gun Club.

Great Sport in the Woods Around Toledo—How to Test the Qualities of a Hunting Dog.

"An ingenious invention in the line of photography is announced from Vienna. It consists of a miniature apparatus of aluminium, which is attached to the barrel of the gun. When a shot is fired an instantaneous exposure is made, and a circular photograph is obtained which shows the object aimed at."

The above is published for the benefit of the Hirssig Gun club, which has been organized with all the prospects of a very flattering career. The members of the club all have a taste for art and it would be a nice thing to retain the photographs, at least, of the birds that fly away. It would prevent many embarrassing explanations when the boys return and tell about the number of birds that fell dead in the high weeds and could not be found.



The Start.

The Hirssig Gun club was organized two months ago and is now in a flourishing condition, and among the members are C. C. Hirssig, Frank Hirssig, F. C. Smith, Jack Witman, Ed Unbehaun and other well known hunters of the Seventh ward.

"A Bird."

In order that no bird guilty of coming within gun shot can escape, the club has imported a hunting dog of much value, and with the other dogs from the Witman kennel the club finds itself in first-class shape. The boys have just returned from a hunt in the woods back of Baumberger's, and so far as game was concerned the outing was entirely successful, but there is a quiet rumor going the rounds that part of the story of their few days' sport never got to the public.

Bang!

Some of the members of the club are not as good shots as others and the accident that befell one of the dogs is shown in the series of cuts accompanying this sketch. The boys are not cast down by the accident, for, while it did show poor markmanship, it certainly proved the good qualities of the dog, for he brought in what had been shot, even though it was under the most trying circumstances.

Brought In.

The story is pathetic and is best told by the cuts, which illustrate it far better than words can describe it.

Hirssig and Smith both plead "not guilty," and up to the hour of going to press Jack Witman could not be found to either deny or affirm the report.

M'KINLEY'S PAUPER STATISTICS.

Dr. Washington Gladden Charges Him With Misstatements.

Columbus, O., Nov. 11.—In a lecture at his church upon the problem of poverty, Rev. Dr. Washington Gladden severely criticised Major McKinley for stating repeatedly upon the stump during his campaign that there were only 90,000 paupers in the United States.

The doctor read from an official report statistics showing that Columbus had on its charity rolls last year 12,000 people besides the infirmary inmates, and from the secretary of state's report stating that there are 44,000 inmates of infirmaries in Ohio. He said he hoped Columbus had not one-eighth and Ohio half of all the paupers in the United States.

WILL BE SENATOR ABBETT

He Made a Noble Fight for Democracy,

And Will Be Rewarded By His Faithful Followers.

New Jersey Solidly in the Ranks for Lower Taxes—A Victory That Will Count for Much in Time to Come.

Trenton N. J., Nov. 11.—The sweeping victory which the democrats achieved at the state election last Tuesday secures to Gov. Abbett the much coveted prize of his political career—a seat in the United States senate.

His friends entertain no doubt whatever that, if he lives, he will succeed Rufus Blodgett as junior senator from New Jersey, and the republicans even admit that any further opposition to him would be futile.

Leon Abbett.

The governor himself directed the campaign this fall from the start to the finish, and his chosen and trusty lieutenant, ex-Judge Allen L. McDermott, who is chairman of the state committee, carried out its details with that courage and precision for which he has already won distinction.

A thorough organization of their forces in every city, town and hamlet, and more particularly in those counties in which state senators were elected, enabled the leaders of the democratic cohorts to enter the contest with a confidence as to the outcome which has seldom or ever been equaled in any campaign in New Jersey.

The result is very significant. Besides securing Gov. Abbett the seat now occupied by Senator Blodgett, it means, also, that New Jersey is a rock-ribbed democratic state which cannot be disturbed from its moorings unless by a fierce and unexpected political cyclone. The election of all the democratic candidates for the state senate in the seven counties where there were contests insures the senate to the democrats for the next three years without a doubt. Next year it would be impossible for the republicans to regain control of that body, because 14 democratic senators will then hold over, and 11 are a majority. Contests will occur in seven counties next year and the democrats will almost certainly carry four of these—Hudson, Morris, Bergen and Mercer—and will have a good fighting chance in Atlantic.

Next year the senate will stand 16 democrats and 5 republicans, and the house 42 democrats and 18 republicans, making a clear democratic majority of 35 on joint ballot. In a score of years neither party has had such a large majority as this. In 1893, when a United States senator will be chosen, it is probable that this majority will be maintained and it may go still higher. Every democrat who was elected to the legislature this year, with the exception of one in Monmouth county, is a pronounced Abbett man, he having so declared himself at the convention which nominated him.

Monmouth county is the home of Senator Blodgett and Henry S. Little, who are bitterly opposed to Gov. Abbett. It is the only county in the state which is under the influence of these politicians. Outside of it they have been unable to muster even a corporal's guard of followers. The governor and his friends say they can do without Monmouth county and if the democrats there have chosen to link their fortunes with those of Blodgett and Little its their own funeral. The only Blodgett-Little men who will have seats in the next legislature are Senator Brown and Assemblyman Strahan of Monmouth county.

The real surprises of the recent election occurred in the republican counties of Passaic, Burlington and Cape May, in all of which democratic senators were chosen. Allan McDermott, in the midst of the campaign, predicted that those counties would go democratic, and he was laughed at by the republicans. But when the returns on election night assured the election of the democratic candidates the republicans seemed dumfounded.

They could hardly believe their own ears. The fight was very short in Burlington, and at one time it looked as if Perkins, the democratic senatorial candidate, would be defeated by treachery in his own ranks. The democratic leaders had their forces well drilled, however, and they succeeded in overcoming the loss which treachery had caused in one or two townships.

Assemblyman White is criticised for the result in Pemberton township, which gave him over 300 majority, while the republican candidate for the senate, Mr. Hays, received a majority of nearly 200. The democratic leaders accuse Mr. White and his friends of treachery in that township, in which he has his own home. Mr. Perkins' own popularity and the feud between the Sewell and anti-Sewell factions, were the main factors which secured his election.

The overturning of the 1,800 republican majority in Passaic county by Mr. Hinchcliffe, the democratic senator-elect, was, indeed, a genuine surprise all around. But, as in Burlington, there were republican feuds in that county, too, which opened the way for a democratic victory. In Cape May the fight was short, sharp and decisive, and resulted in the overthrow of the doughty little republican school teacher, Eugene C. Cole, whose independence lost him many republican votes.

The republican leaders cry fraud, bribery, Abbettism, and charge that the result was anything else but an honest expression of the people's will. But next year they say they will inaugurate a campaign which will sweep the state from Sussex to Cape May. With Gen. Grubb in the saddle they will marshal their forces to victory and carry the state for their electoral ticket, their candidate for governor, and capture the legislature. "Let them come, we are ready for them at any time—especially for Grubb," said Allan McDermott when he was told of this republican threat.

ART OF PUTTING ON A VEIL.

The art of putting on a veil neatly and in a becoming manner is too little studied. Many women dress deliberately and carefully; they see that skirt and wrap are nicely adjusted, and the gloves neatly fitted on and buttoned, and in a last, hurried moment, hurry on the veil, in many cases tying an unsightly knot at the back of hat or bonnet that looks anything but taut or attractive.

It is the best plan to put on the hat before putting on the bodice, then the arms are entirely free. One long pin and some pretty short ones are very useful in the arrangement of a veil, but besides the pins a good way is to take a needle threaded with some silk the tint of the veil.

Put about 15 fine stitches in each end of the long, straight strip of net or tulle, draw these up into a little close cluster and fasten tightly; then double the veil in one fold to come directly in front. At the top of this fold gather another little cluster and fasten.

There are now no ends to fly at the back or to be clumsily tied, nothing but some compact gathers to be fastened to each other with a small hat pin. The gathers in front on the top of the veil are meant to give a little freedom to the face it covers, doing away with the uncomfortable sensation of a tight mask distorting every feature.—N. Y. Evening Post.

A RAPID TRANSFORMATION.

"About eight years ago," said Auditor Joseph Brown, "I was in London, England. One day I bought a stall to see Patti at the Royal. A stall corresponds to our boxes. When the evening came I took the ladies around and walked in at the door. But I did not get far.

"'You cannot come in here,' said the door-keeper.

"'Why not?' I asked in surprise. 'Here are my seat tickets.'

"'Well, you cannot enter,' he replied decisively; 'your coat is a frock and nothing but dress suits are allowed.'

"I expostulated. I told him that my hotel was a long way off and that the ladies would be greatly disappointed. I was an American and did not know the rules of the theater.

"Finally he told me to go into the dressing-room, where the attendants might perhaps be able to fix me out all right.

"I went, expecting to pay two or three crowns for the loan of a coat. The fellow looked at me a second, whipped a pin from his lapel, and pinned my coat-tails back, and I found myself in evening dress.

"I gave the man half a crown."—St. Louis Chronicle.

POINTS OF THE COMPASS AMONG PUEBLOS.

Among the Pueblo Indians six points of the compass are recognized, and each has its color. North is yellow, west is blue, south is red, east is white; the upper regions are many colored and the lower regions are black. All the prey gods are represented by their images in these six colors.

For example, there is the yellow mountain lion of the north, the blue mountain lion of the west, the red mountain lion of the south, and so on. Likewise it is with the other beasts, and thus a very considerable number of deities is formed. All of them must receive worshipful attention lest they get angry and revenge themselves for the neglect.—Washington Star.

One objection to the matted row system of growing strawberries is the drain on the soil for moisture in a dry season. The matted row system will never produce strawberries equal to those grown in hills. On the hill system several crops can be grown, in the other only about one, while the work of plowing up and replanting counts heavily against the plan.

this order began the agitation and work for ballot reform there was no state in the United States that carried on elections under a law that afforded protection to the laborer who might desire to cast his vote in secret. As a result of the five years of labor we can point in triumph to 18 states in which the secret ballot has been adopted. We may indeed congratulate our members in these states on the work they have done. In Pennsylvania our efforts were fruitless owing to the fact that the constitution of the state calls for the marking of the ballot, and, as a consequence, there can be no secrecy there until that part of the constitution is obliberated. Four years ago the agitation for the abolition of the ballot-numbering clause began; then it was discovered that other sections in the constitution were oppressive and an agitation for a constitutional convention was begun and continued by four men until they awoke the echoes in the legislature and senate of Pennsylvania and caused that body to enact a law allowing the people to vote on the holding of a convention to amend the constitution of the state. On the 3d of this month the question was voted on and defeated. On one side stood the rank and file of this order, and all of these were not fully alive to the necessity for a change. On the other side stood the giant corporations that have made the name of Pennsylvania a synonym for corporate greed everywhere, allied to them was the powerful press of the state, and behind these stood the bosses of the two parties that juggle with the liberties of the people of that state.

It seems to me that we should add one section to the Preamble of the Order. Elaborate argument is not necessary to convince our members that the greatest vigilance must be constantly exercised in every state in order to prevent the passage of laws that will oppress the people or favor monopoly. With the immense sums of money at their disposal it is an easy matter for trusts and combines to silently push legislation, favoring their interests, through the various legislatures. To counteract the evil effects of this practice we should begin an agitation for the establishment of the system of referring all laws to the people before they are acted on by the legislature. Such a system will enable the people to take the initiative in enacting legislation and will forever prevent the passage of such laws as have for their object the fostering of monopoly or the oppression of the people. Let us demand the establishment of the Referendum in the various states and countries where our order exists. Another section added to the Preamble worded somewhat like this will begin an agitation for a much-needed reform:

That all laws shall be submitted to the people for their scrutiny and approval before they are passed upon by congresses or legislatures.

If we do this we will be the recipients of much criticism it is true, but in the end will witness the adoption of a system that will prevent hasty legislation, enable the people to become conversant with public affairs, and do away with the lobby and the lobbyist as well as the bribe-giver and taker who pollute the atmospheres of our halls of legislation.

Mr. Powderly suggests that it would be well to change the name of the paper printed by the order.

The sentiment in favor of the establishment of a uniformed rank is growing in the Order, and many of our young members are desirous of giving it a test. There can be no harm in permitting those who favor the idea to put it in practice, and I recommend its adoption.

Once before I recommended that we establish a degree for those who are too young to become members of the Order as it now exists; and although the matter was regarded with favor by the general assembly, it was not put in operation through some misunderstanding as to a patented or copyrighted formula which would give the management of the institution over to those who might not be at all times in sympathy with the Order and its principles. It seems to me that the best way to educate the youth is to bring them into the Order as it is and allow them to witness, as silent members for a time, the workings of the Order. We must reach the young if we are to accomplish great good. I recommend that this subject be taken up by the committee on Good of the Order and that they recommend a plan of admitting members who are not of the age required by our laws.

Those who attended past general assemblies will, as they rise to face the centre at the beginning and close of each session, miss the face and form of Richard Griffiths. When the gavel fell at the close of the Denver session he took his last look, bid his last farewell to his old companions in arms and turned away toward that other land where night never falls and where the reward of labor done on earth is given to the faithful worker. As the buds of spring were blossoming into summer flowers the meshes of years that had bound him to earth were severed, the light of a new life dawned upon him, and, laying forever away the memories of all the struggles and contentions of this earth, his spirit parted in eternal farewell from those he loved, and who loved him, on earth. Never again will he respond to roll-call in the general assembly, and on the master workman's roll-book of his local his name will forever be recorded among the absent. In life he loved the sea, and the funeral cortege which took its last farewell of his loved presence in the city of Chicago last May gave him up that his remains might sleep within sound of the waves of old ocean as they sing in endless requiem near his rock-bound grave. While thinking of him sterner eyes than mine will fill with tears over his absence. I miss the faithful friend, the trusted counselor, the warm, honest touch of his true right hand, the old familiar smile that always caused those who were fortunate enough to know him to welcome his presence.

When the notes of discord rang out in tones that threatened the existence of this order his voice was always first to sound above the noise of warring elements and plead for the unity and preservation of the order. To its weal he gave his every thought, for its reverses he shed many a silent tear, and to its prosperity he gave every effort of his dying years. It is not in books that man learns his duty—the inspiration to noble deeds is not given or laid down in rule or precept—these spring from the heart when it beats earnestly in sympathy with the work in hand. Some one has said that "a man perfects himself by work more than by reading," and if mortal approached perfection in working for the good of his fellow-creature that man was our own Richard Griffiths. No words of mine can sound his praises, no earthly voice or pen can do him justice, for no more loving or faithful heart ever gave its motion to the good of humanity. Not in eloquence or rhetoric did he excel, nor did he aspire to great deeds or advanced ideas, for it was by hard, persistent, patient work that he won the undying gratitude of every lover of the race.

Beset by suffering, privation and poverty, no one ever heard him murmur; in silence he bowed to affliction and with unchanged features he met reverses as they rolled against him. Amid all of this he clung to the ideal organization that had won his earnest devotion. In sunshine and in shadow, in storm or calm, in season and out of season, he stood ready to defend the life, interest and reputation of each true member of this order, and in paying this last tribute of respect to his sacred memory I feel that in the great hereafter, when the questions that now stir the world to its center are solved, there will be no more joyous spirit in that vale beyond the stars than that of him whose eternal part went from earth, amid the perfume of May-day blossoms, to join that Great Assembly above, the charter-roll of which began when the world was new and on which no name will shine more brightly than that of our loved and lost Richard Griffiths,

Who serenely to his final rest has passed,
While the soft memory of his virtues yet
Lingers, like twilight hues when the bright sun has set.

Make two cakes, one with Cleveland's baking powder; the second with any other. Note the difference.

The Cleveland cake is fine grained, keeps its natural flavor and moisture; "the other" is coarse grained, as if the sugar was too coarse, soon dries out and becomes husky.

Cleveland's leavens best because its strength is produced by cream of tartar and soda only, not by ammonia or alum.

Secretary-Treasurer Hayes' Report.

To the Officers and Members of the General Assembly, Greeting:

I beg to submit for your information my report for the year ending June 30, 1891. The year has been one in which the utmost care and watchfulness has been required and which has taxed the energies of your general officers to manage the affairs of the order with success. The volume of correspondence which has passed through the general office has been great and has required unwearied zeal on the part of the clerks employed, and to their cheerful co-operation I am greatly indebted, as it has enabled me to keep the business of the office in the forward state which I am glad to be able to report it.

In administering the finances of the order I have kept future results in view, and have, with the approval of the general executive board, met as far as possible the views of those assemblies who, because of local troubles involving the expenditure of their funds, found themselves unable to pay their tax to the general assembly either partially or wholly. Such exonerations, however, though involving small sums in each case, amount to considerable in the aggregate and are a serious reduction of the general revenue. This fact should not be lost sight of, and I would urge upon local assemblies who find themselves temporarily embarrassed and cramped for funds to remember that the per capita tax is purposely fixed at as low a figure as is compatible with the efficient carrying on of the business of the order.

It will continue to be my constant endeavor to avoid all expenditure which is not strictly necessary, and I will conduct the business of the office with the strictest economy consistent with efficiency.

In accordance with the rule adopted at the Atlanta session the books of my office have been kept to cover the financial year, and I have brought them to this session for the inspection of the finance committee and of the delegates. Vouchers for all the expenditures of the year are also at your command. Nothing is better calculated to establish confidence among the membership of the order than an honest administration of its financial affairs, and I would invite a very careful and strict examination of my books and accounts on the part, not only of the committee specially appointed for the purpose, but of each and every delegate. You will find the system of bookkeeping to be a simple one, and even those who have no practical knowledge of accounts will have no difficulty in understanding it.

From some things that have come to knowledge, I am led to believe that there are cases in which assemblies through their secretaries make returns and reports to the general office which do not agree with those made by them to their district or state assemblies. As the law stands there is no way of checking this, and I would suggest that the general assembly devise some means whereby it may be prevented in future.

I have no other especial suggestions or recommendations to make of an official nature, but shall be happy to render any assistance that may be in my power to the general assembly or any of its committees during the session.

I would venture to express the hope that the order may be permitted to enjoy at least a brief period of repose, free from contests and labor troubles, after the eventful and exciting year that has closed, and that the pecuniary resources of the office may be permitted to accumulate so as to enable your general officers, in future cases of emergency, to be able to act with greater promptitude and efficiency, so that they may have more time to devote to the order's educational work.

The following statement will show the money received and expended during the financial year commencing July 1, 1890, and ending June 30, 1891, inclusive:

The expenditures of the year were $102,474.36; disbursements, $99,685.22; balance on hand at beginning of year, $13,053.13; balance on hand July 1, 1891, $10,263.99.

A detailed and itemized account of all receipts and expenditures is then given. The following is the summary of the principal sources of revenue for the fiscal year: From supplies, $8,122.39; per capita tax, $30,306.31; Journal of Knights of Labor, $10,668.88; charter fees, $6,925.65. Other sources foot up the total aggregate of receipts to $99,685.22.

Some 50,000 members of the Order, in various localities, have been excused from the payment of dues because of their having local troubles to attend to, such as prevailed last summer in the coke regions of Pennsylvania. As per capita tax is only 6 cents a quarter on a member, it will be seen the financial report bears out the claim as to the present membership in the order. It is a marvel how so much has been accomplished when the very small amount collected from individual members is considered.

General Executive Board.

There appears to be a growing feeling among our brothers in Great Britain and Ireland in favor of their being placed in a position to more fully control their own affairs, and your general executive board has ventured to assure them that the Order in America will be favorably disposed toward anything they may find necessary in this direction, desiring only that the best interests of those who believe in the Order's principles should be advanced in all countries. The general assembly must, in the near future, devise plans which will enable our brothers, not only in Great Britain and Europe, but in the Australias and New Zealand as well, to work in the ways which their varying circumstances and conditions require.

The labels of the Order, more especially the cigar label, have been extensively counterfeited, and owing to this and to other causes our efforts to push the sale of labeled goods and to create a healthy demand for them have been less successful than could have been desired. Your board has obtained legal advice regarding the feasibility of securing effective legal protection for the label, has had considerable correspondence with members of the Order and others as to the best means of creating a demand for labeled goods, and would suggest that a special committee be appointed at this session of the general assembly to report upon the best steps to be taken to accomplish the end desired.

At the last session of the general assembly your board was authorized to have translations made in different languages of such portions of the constitution as might be necessary for the use of local assemblies working in those languages. Representations coming from many quarters and our own judgment, however, caused us to believe that the present constitution might be very considerably shortened, condensed and simplified without materially changing its provisions, and we have thought it well, on the score of economy, to delay publishing the translations spoken of until you shall have deliberated whether you will decide upon having the constitution shortened or condensed, as suggested. We believe that it would be well at this session either to instruct the committee on law to make a condensation of the constitution or else appoint a special committee to do the work. In order to avoid the necessity of changes in the near future, it might be well at this session, if the suggestion of your board is approved, to suspend the rule governing amendments to the constitution in order that all needed changes in the law might be made now.

Committees Appointed.

Before the afternoon session closed the following committees were appointed to act during the convention:

On Distribution of Documents—J. G. Schonfarber, Maryland; Henry A. Hicks, New York; James H. James, Oregon.

On Secret Work—Hugh Cavanaugh, Ohio; J. H. Nightengale, Pennsylvania; Andrew D. Best, New York; Charles H. Litchman, Massachusetts, and General Master Workman Powderly.

On Press—A. W. Wright, Canada; I. D. Chamberlain, Nebraska; T. J. O'Reiley, New York.

On Telegrams and Communications—James A. Wright, Pennsylvania; David O. Connell, Kentucky; M. F. Hubbs, Washington, D. C.

On Appeals and Grievances—Henry Graber, New Jersey; Hugh Greenan, New York; George L. Coke, Pennsylvania; E. J. Lindholm, Illinois; Henry I. Allen, Michigan.

To-Day's Session.

The settlement of disputed claims to seats in this convention, by the general assembly itself, upon final report of the committee on credentials, occupied the morning hours to-day. This afternoon the report of the committee on law is being considered.

Telegrams Sent.

Baltimore, Md.

The general assembly of the Knights of Labor, in their fifteenth regular annual session at Toledo, O., sends fraternal greeting to their brothers in the cause of humanity, the Marble Workers' National union, now assembled in annual session at Baltimore. May your deliberations result in great good to the members of your craft, and may your work for the welfare of the army of labor be more enduring than monuments of marble.

JAMES A WRIGHT,
Chairman of Committee.

Toledo, O., Nov. 11, '91.

To Alvin Agee,
President Farmers Alliance and Industrial Union of Ohio, in Session at Columbus:

The general assembly of the Knights of Labor in convention assembled extend through you to the Farmers of Ohio fraternal greetings, and wish you success in the work in which you are engaged.

JAMES A. WRIGHT,
Chairman of Committee,
Ohio Ex. Com. K. of L.

Toledo, O., Nov. 11, '91.

Alvin Agee:
Pres. Farmer's Alliance and Industrial Union of Ohio in session at Columbus:

The Knights of Labor of Ohio, through their representatives in the general assembly, K. of L., send you and your organization fraternal greetings, and their hearty wishes for the highest degree of success to your convention.

Hugh Cavanaugh, Chairman.
A. P. Stevens, Secretary.

In the Case of J. J. Holland.

The general executive board in their report refer to the expulsion by the Florida state assembly of J. J. Holland, one of the members of the board. It seems after the state assembly expelled Mr. Holland, he appealed to the board, and the board having sustained the state assembly in its action, he appeals to the general assembly.

Mr. Holland arrived in the city last evening, registering at the Jefferson, and has been busy button-holing new delegates ever since. Those delegates who have attended previous sessions of the general assembly, and have personal knowledge of his connection with the order, have their own opinion of Mr. Holland's usefulness and value to the order, and the opinion very generally expressed is that Mr. Holland is of more value to the order on the outside, and being there will remain there.

Should he press his appeal rich developments are promised. There are several other appeals against decisions of the board, but none that will not be adjusted without trouble, to every one's satisfaction.

LAST NIGHT'S RECEPTION

It Was a Success of Which D. A. 72 May Well Be Proud.

It was perhaps fortunate for the local Knights of Labor that last evening was so stormy, and that rain was falling in torrents at the hour when people would have been wending their way to the Memorial building. The hall in which the reception to the Knights of Labor was given was the lower hall of that building, and notwithstanding the inclement weather its seating capacity was none too large for the crowd that assembled.

The vice presidents upon the platform were Revs. S. D. Hutsinpiller, Chas. Cravens, G. F. Smythe, W. C. Hopkins, George Candee and A. G. Jennings, representing the clergy; President W. J. Gray, of the Cigarmakers' union and President Daniel Campbell, of the Flint Glass Workers' union, representing the labor organizations.

In the absence of District Master Workman Hudson, who was unable to attend, District Secretary Stevens announced the purpose for which the meeting was held, and presented Mayor Emmick as the chairman, and as the representative of Toledo, who would welcome the visitors to the city for the citizens.

This Mayor Emmick did in a brief speech, expressing his pleasure at the opportunity afforded him to recognize the organization and show approval of its purpose. He then presented the first speaker, General Master Workman Powderly, who was greeted with enthusiastic applause as he came forward, and was many times interrupted by the same expressions of approval while he was speaking.

Mr. Powderly, who had been traveling all night to reach the city at 10 o'clock in the morning, and presiding over the convention during the day spoke briefly, but every remark told.

He began by pointing to the cannon upon the stand, and stating that the purpose of the Knights of Labor was to hold by the education and elevation of the people what was won by the cannon years ago. He spoke of the demand of the knights for "equal rights for both sexes" as meaning not alone the right of suffrage, but that all rights man was entitled to were the rights of woman also; that anything it was good man should have, the wife, mother and sister of the man should also enjoy.

On the question of the knights in politics, Mr. Powderly emphatically and clearly defined the position of the order. The principle demands of the platform of the knights is for reforms through legislation. Wherever and whenever in a political campaign or during a legislative session these reforms were advocated or attempted, there the knight worked as a knight to further the cause of good and better government, which was also his cause. Beyond that point whatever he did in politics he did as an individual. The organization does not prevent a member acting as a partisan where its own principles are not at stake, but in his partisanship it is the man and not the order that is involved.

The question of the World's fair and Sunday was one, Mr. Powderly said, which would come before the convention, and on which his opinion had already been asked. His belief was that many earnest and sincere people were advocating a stricter observance of the Sunday, and that in their appeals for support they were well-intentioned. For his part he would say to them "Make Sunday a day of rest if you will, but begin with your maid-servant and your man-servant."

The Knights of Labor believe in Sunday as a Sunday of rest. They are opposed to all work on that day. But while labor is unemployed the country over, and shiploads of laborers are constantly arriving, this organization does not believe that workmen enough cannot be found to conduct the world's fair exhibition seven days, if necessary, without working any one set of men seven days.

He could not say what action the convention would take on this question, though some action would be taken, but he believed it would be to this effect, a demand that if the fair is to be closed on Sunday all employers of labor in Chicago shall give one holiday in the week in order that their employes shall have a chance to visit the fair.

Mr. Powderly had also something to say on the school question, his remarks being called out by a foolish story which has been circulated through some newspapers, based upon an alleged interview with an alleged delegate to the purport that this general assembly intended to take some action against sectarian schools of any sort.

What he said was not new doctrine to the knights for he but elucidated the work in which they are always engaged, and which lies near the heart of every true knight.

This is an educational organization. It strives to be constantly teaching its members, and by the interchange of views between members they seek to increase each his brother's knowledge. One of their earliest demands and one for which they are always ready to work is that which insists children shall be kept out of workshops, mines and factories, and be kept in school. In many states they have succeeded in having enacted laws to that effect. Everywhere and always they demanded this, and they would be satisfied with no less.

Beyond this they do not go. They do not seek to say in what school or by what system children should be educated, so that they were educated. The Knights of Labor have their evening schools in assembly rooms to teach members the purposes and work of the order. These schools are very successful wherever established, as in D. A. 49, New York city, and the convention would probably consider the more general establishment of such schools in the order. It might be from this the unfounded rumor started which had gained such circulation.

But he could say for the Knights of Labor, and he did say, that their one and only demand for schools was that the children should go to them. For himself he was educated in the public school. He was proud of the public schools and proud to remember what he had learned there, and his right hand would never be raised against them.

Mr. Powderly concluded his remarks by returning thanks, on behalf of the delegates, for the reception tendered by Toledo citizens, and the next speaker introduced was A. W. Wright, of the general executive board, editor of the Journal of Knights of Labor.

It is always a rich treat to listen to Mr. Wright, who is one of the most eloquent and forceful speakers in the order, thoroughly imbued with its principles. Notwithstanding Mr. Wright has lived so many years over the border in Toronto, he is a canny Scotchman, and he knows how to tell a story and to bring it in where it will do the most good. He spoke for over one hour, and it is safe to say his audience would have been glad to listen to him an hour longer.

He dwelt upon the evils of the present industrial system, upon the evil of the wage system which all who investigate acknowledge is culminating in a slavery worse than chattel slavery. His long journeys about the country in the interests of the order have enabled him to see for himself the things he so vividly portrays.

One of the things he has seen in the south is a manufacturing concern paying its help, white and black, in due bills payable two years from date without interest, and if so much as five cents is traded out of one of these bills at the company's store, then it must all be traded out.

He portrayed the impossibility of rearing children to be good men and women in the environment which surrounds too many homes in our great cities; the choice that is forced upon too many of our young girls between sin and starvation; the breaking up of homes because wife as well as husband must labor for daily bread; the dread pressure of circumstances and fear of greater poverty which keeps young men and women from marrying at the age when they ought to marry. These and many other evils under which the people groan he brought home to the competitive system in burning words and with apt illustrations.

"It is not," said Mr. Wright, "the individual employer we blame. It is the system. He is as helpless as we. We are all tangled up in one snarl."

On the land question Mr. Wright stated he was not an extremist, and then proved it by saying that until men or corporations now claiming to own coal and oil lands, and unused land of any kind, could show their title deeds to the same from God he should hold they were in unlawful possession.

The advice of Mr. Edward Atkinson that workingmen should live cheaper was set up by Mr. Wright against the "iron law of wages," which employs at the minimum price, and it was demonstrated that to live as Mr. Atkinson would have workingmen live, "on soup made by hanging meat in a window where its shadow would fall on a kettle of water, and boiling the shadow down into soup" had but one effect, to lower wages. When workingmen could not buy what they needed, producers suffered from the loss of custom, manufactories shut down and the fool cry was raised of "overproduction." The only overproduction he knew of was an overproduction of fools in senates and legislatures, and of fools at the ballot box who sent them there.

Hugh Cavanaugh, worthy foreman of the order, was the next speaker, and he promised to be brief, and kept his word. Mr. Cavanaugh confined his remarks mainly to what Ohio knights had secured in legislation, and to the good effect of the representative meetings that have been held in the last year. There will be another meeting the coming winter, to prepare for more work, for more laws in the interests of labor must be past, and laws already enacted must be better enforced. He appealed to the citizens of Toledo to give their moral support to the knights in this work.

This ended the regular program of the evening, and the audience was about to disperse when Mayor Emmick suddenly brought about an experience meeting by calling upon Rev. S. D. Hutsinpiller for a speech.

Mr. Hutsinpiller occupied about two minutes in saying he was with the knights in their work, and could say "Amen" to what he had heard in the meeting.

Revs. Hopkins, Cravens, Smythe, Candee and Jennings in turn were called upon and each and all said "Amen."

The audience was asked its further pleasure, and several voices called for "Trevillick." "Uncle Dick" came to the platform and spoke for a few minutes, counting over the 42 years in which he had held "a clear card" in some labor organization or other. In beautiful words he upheld the dignity of all honest labor, and bade all remember that labor of all sorts, however lowly, was worthy of honor, and should command respect.

Past G. W. F. Richard Griffiths.

Among the many prominent names connected with the history of the order and the work of labor reform few are better known than that of Richard Griffiths, past general worthy foreman. Mr. Griffiths was born in Swansea, South Wales, in November, 1827. While quite young he became much interested in reading Captain Cook's voyages around the globe, which created a strong desire to travel and see the world for himself, and at the age of fourteen years he ran away from home and went to sea as a cabin boy. He made several voyages to the West Indies, finally bringing up in the United States.

He then entered the United States naval service, and after a number of year's honorable service in many waters

he settled in the town of Hopkinton, Mass., where he learned the trade of crimping boots, and where he quitely worked for seven years, when, thinking he could better his condition in the West, he removed in 1864 to Milwaukee, Wis., where he worked about three years, when he removed to Chicago, Ill.

When the Order of the Knights of St. Crispin was started he became an active member and hard worker, filling a number of important offices.

He joined the Order of the Knights of Labor in 1877 and organized the first assembly in Chicago, L. A. 400. He was a representative at the general assembly, and attended almost every subsequent session. At the Indianapolis session he was presented with a beautiful jeweled K. of L. badge, token of the esteem in which he was held by the members of the order. At the Denver session, in 1890, he represented D. A. 24 for the last time and for the last time his voice was heard in a general convention of the Knights.

Notes.

The resolution of D. A. 72 for an open fair on Sundays was handed in to-day.

Many of the delegates are stopping with private families, guests of brother knights or friends.

A congratulatory telegram will be sent to the farmer's alliance in session at Elizabethtown, Ky.

A number of people went to Walbridge hall last night, under the impression that the meeting was there.

Every indication is that the dance at Pythian castle this evening will be a success in every sense of the word.

By unanimous consent the committee representing the Ohio State W. C. T. U. will be received at 3 o'clock to-morrow afternoon.

One of the Iowa delegates comes with a chromo of Governor Boies as the people's candidate for president on the democratic ticket.

An invitation to attend the meeting of the Toledo Economic society this evening in Steadman Business college was extended to the delegates.

The regular sessions of the convention were fixed this morning. The morning session will be from 9 to 12, th afternoon sessions from 2 to 6 o'clock, standard time.

An invitation to visit the Manual Training school of Toledo was extended to the delegates from the trustees was received, and accepted for 11 a. m. to-morrow morning.

To-morrow and Friday evenings the meetings in Walbridge hall are for knights only. Members of locals in D. A. 72 and delegates to the convention are invited, and only these will be admitted.

Mesdames E. A. Edwards, Josephine Marlett, Walter R. Jones, Phoebe Clark and Miss Jessie Foster, committee appointed by the state W. C. T. U., have asked to be received by the convention. The request will be complied with, and the ladies will probably be received to-morrow afternoon.

It is likely the manual training school will be visited by the delegates. Mayor Emmick extended an invitation during his speech at Memorial hall last night, and at the close of the meeting Mr. A. E. [illegible] on behalf of the trustees of the school, gave an invitation to Mr. Powderly and through him to the delegates.

Invitations were extended to sixteen ministers of the city to act as vice presidents of last night's meeting. Of these all but four were present, or sent their regrets that other unavoidable engagements prevented their attendance. Among those present when Mr. Powderly spoke before and unable to attend last evening were Revs. J. A. P. McGaw and H. M. Bacon. Revs. A. J. Fish and D. M. Fisk were also unable to be present, but have put themselves on record with those who did speak for the clergy last night as with this movement.

SWEEPING THE SEA

And Driving the Sailors Upon the Rocks.

Another Terrible Storm Raging Over England.

The Shores of the Islands Lined With Wrecks,

And Many Brave Men Swallowed By the Waves.

Hosts of Volunteers Join the Life Savers in Trying to Rescue the Ship-Wrecked Men, But Their Efforts Prove Powerless Under Adverse Circumstances.

London, Nov. 11.—Another furious southeasterly gale is sweeping over the British coasts and is causing an immense amount of damage.

From a number of points the news has been telegraphed that ships are ashore and that their crews are in danger of drowning or are already drowned. Following so closely upon the many recent storms which have spread death and destruction on the coasts of England, Ireland and Scotland and which have done an immense amount of damage to the crops, besides flooding whole districts and destroying railroad embankments, this latest storm is really more than even the most sanguine of British farmers can pass through without despondency.

To give an entire list of wrecks reported this morning would be a difficult and lengthy task.

A dispatch from Hytes, Kent, just received, says the French schooner Edirimi has foundered off that place and that the vessel's captain, his wife and son were drowned in spite of the efforts of the life savers, who were enabled to take off the rest of the crew.

The captain of the Edirimi, however, refused to leave the vessel and his wife and son refused to be separated from him, preferring drowning with the brave sailor to being saved without him.

A telegram received about the same time from Sandgate, not far from Hytes, says that the British ship Bienvenue, of Glasgow, has been driven ashore after a terrible struggle with the storm.

The crew of the Sandgate lifeboat station made every effort possible to launch their boat, but without success. The lifeboat was rolled over and over by the pounding surf and finally the life savers gave up the attempt to get her afloat.

The rocket line was then called into service and four times did the little cannon belch forth its shot and chain to which the cable line was attached, but each time the shot fell short of the endangered vessel.

All this time crowds of people were standing upon the shore watching the agony of the crew of the Bienvenue, who had been lashed to the ship's rigging for hours, numbed with cold and drenched to the skin by the spray.

As each successive wave which struck her shook the stranded craft from stem to stern, she was driven higher and higher upon the rocks which were grinding and crunching her bottom planking with each movement she made.

When the crew of the Bienvenue saw the futile efforts of the Sandgate life-savers to launch their boat and their failure to convey the line of the breeches-buoy to them, they gave away to despair, pitifully motioning for aid and imploring help from the crowds of people lining the shore.

Hosts of volunteers went to the assistance of the regular life boatmen and these amateur life-savers tried to do what the regular boatmen had failed to do. Three times the volunteers, assisting the regular crew, tried to get the lifeboat through the terrible surf, but still without success, the heavy self-righting and self-emptying boat was lifted up at right angles by the waves and tossed over as if nothing more than a large cork, nearly crushing some of the life-savers, who, had it not been for the immense life belts they wore, would have undoubtedly been drowned.

As it was, it required the efforts of scores of volunteers, forming life lines, hand and hand into the surf, to rescue the imperilled boatmen.

During this time the situation of the men in the rigging of the Bienvenue became more desperate every moment. The women and children and even strong men ashore, realizing that all hope of saving them must be abandoned, wrung their hands and wept and a cry of horrer passed over the crowds as, one by one, the numbed, weakened sailors dropped from the Bienvenue's rigging and were swallowed up by the angry waters surging around the doomed craft.

As this dispatch is sent, about noon, there are but five of the crew of the Bienvenue left in the rigging, her hull is entirely submerged and her masts are expected to go by the board at any moment.

The only hope of saving the few men who are still clinging to the rigging, rests in the lifeboat which the surf has so frequently driven back. Further attempts will be made to launch her by hauling her through the surf out to a buoy some way down the coast.

While these attempts at rescue were going on, a telegraphic message from Hastings, on the same coast, and not very far from Sandgate and Hytes, announces that the Hastings lifeboat is making a desperate struggle to reach a barque, supposed to be a British vessel, which has been driven ashore at some distance from that watering place. The barque is in a most perilous position. The racket lines and lifeboat have, up to noon, utterly failed to reach the stranded craft and it is feared that she will break up before assistance can reach her.

The sea is terrific and at times the lifeboat is lost sight of.

Strange to say, in spite of this fearful weather prevailing in the channel where lifeboats can hardly live, and where stout vessels are being broken up within a few miles of each other, a small dog managed to swim ashore, near Hastings, apparently from the barque ashore near there. At least the dog reached the surf in safety and was there rescued by people ashore who ventured out into the water for that purpose.

These accounts of wreck give only a small idea of what is going on along the coasts here this morning. In addition to the three vessels mentioned there are many others in distress and much further damage has been done to piers, sea-walls, sea-side railroads, bathing establishments, etc.

At one watering place a long line of bathing houses (on wheels as is usual in this country), which had been drawn up for winter, high up the beach, were washed into the water last night and are now pounding to pieces in the surf.

Later—The Hyte's life-boat has succeeded in getting through the surf and is making a desperate struggle to rescue the men remaining in the rigging of the Bienvenue. The life-boat, however, is making but slow progress and the prospects of rescuing the ship are poor.

3 p. m.—At the hour this message is sent, the survivors of the crew of the Bienvenue, ashore off Sandgate, have not been rescued, and seven of the crew are already reported among the drowned.

In spite of repeated warning from experts that such a course would be both useless and dangerous, the Dover lifeboat crew, stimulated by the efforts of the life-savers of Hytes and Sandgate, has succeeded in getting to sea and is making a most gallant attempt to reach the Bienvenue. It is not thought the men of Dover will succeed where those of Hytes and Sandgate have failed; but the rivalry between the crews is very great and the zeal of the life-savers all along the coast has been stimulated by the recent incident at Sennen, in Wales, where upon the refusal of a number of the regular life-boat cre wto put out to the assistance of a distressed vessel, a volunteer crew, composed of lawyers, clerks and bankers, manned the life-boat and spent the whole night in a furious gale at sea, trying unsuccessfully, it is true, to rescue the endangered mariners.

5 p. m.—The efforts to save the crew of the Bienvenue have resulted in serious loss of life. The Hytes' lifeboat which finally got afloat after a dozen fruitless efforts, has been capsized while trying for the honor of reaching the shipwrecked crew of the Bienvenue. Several of the life savers have been drowned. The exact details of this disaster have not yet reached here.

There are 71 men still in danger in the rigging of the Bienvenue.

Every effort is still being made by the Dover and Sandgate lifeboats to rescue them; but up to this hour the Bienvenue has not been reached and the lifeboat men are almost exhausted with their many hours' struggle with the elements.

From the inland districts come reports that the floods are increasing rapidly and on all sides are the telegraph poles and wires again blown down and useless for the time being.

A fair idea of the force of the storm can be gained from the fact that the entire steamboat service between Dover and Calais, Bologne and Folkstone and between British ports and Ostend has been suspended in spite of the fact that the boats engaged in these services are accustomed to face the most severe weather imaginable.

Many fishing smacks have foundered while vainly struggling to reach port, and quite a number of coasting schooners have met the same fate.

At Lowestoft, near Ipswich, Suffolk, for instance, a fishing smack which, after a long and plucky tussle with the storm, was just upon the point of making Lowestoft harbor, was suddenly completely overwhelmed by more than usually heavy seas and foundered in full sight of thousands of people who were unable to be of any assistance to the crew. The latter, numbering several souls in all, were all drowned.

In case it should be suggested that the ancient mariners who claim that this is the worst storm of many years, are exaggerating, it may said in support of their allegation (made similarly when the previous great storm swept over the channel and elsewhere hereabouts), that it is an undoubted fact that the barometer to-day registers the lowest point reached at least during the year 1891.

TO-NIGHT'S RECEPTION

At the Toledo Club—It Will Be a Brilliant Affair.

The committee in charge of the reception at the Toledo club to-night have made all preparations for the entertainment of the many guests invited. The decorations are very handsome, and the new building looks complete in all its appointments.

A promenade concert, with dancing and light refreshments, are among the attractions, and a most enjoyable evening may be safely anticipated by those who have been honored with invitations.

TOLEDO CITIZEN HONORED

With the Presidency of the Ohio Masonic Home Board of Trustees.

The annual meeting of the board of trustees of the Ohio Masonic Home was held in Springfield yesterday, and the following officers were elected:

President—Leander Burdick, Toledo.

First Vice-President—J. W. Iredell, Cincinnati.

Second Vice-President—W. J. Akers, Cleveland.

Treasurer—J. W. Chamberlain, Tiffin.

Secretary—J. H. Bromwell, Cincinnati.

Building board—J. W. Iredell, W. J. Akers and Edward Hartford.

It is necessary to raise $100,000 before the home is started or building commenced. Over $60,000 of the amount has been already subscribed, and a strenuous effort will be made to secure the balance this year.

Gov. Campbell's Thanksgiving proclamation is a model of terseness, good sentiment and good language.

The Sandusky Register seconds the Bee's motion to put Erie and Lucas in separate congressional districts. There is business sense in this proposition.

The Tiffin Tribune varies the tune and says when (?) Senator Brice is unseated Charley Foster will succeed him. That is another republican slap at Foraker.

The Cleveland Leader, the Columbus Journal and the Dayton Journal, three representative republican Ohio newspapers, are for John Sherman for senator.

The Cleveland Leader says "this would be a blue time for republicans generally were it not for Ohio." And with this little grain of comfort it kicks up its heels like a two-year old colt.

Senator Sherman has said that "the eastern manufacturers need no further protection" and that the recently enacted tariff law can be wisely revised in many particulars. No wonder the Foraker-McKinley crowd want to down him.

The national republican committee will meet in Washington on the 23d inst. to select the place and appoint the time for holding the national convention next year. Cincinnati is making an active effort to secure the convention and has fair prospects of success.

Seven hundred millions of dollars is the reported increase in value of this year's agricultural yield over that of last year in this country. Europe has had the worst crop season for a decade and must be fed from our surplus. Now give the farmer equal rights in buying and selling and an even chance with his manufacturing neighbors and the "agitation" will cease.

Our distinguished republican citizen Hon. W. I. Squire made a great record the past year. On turtle soup night last January there were just 38 league clubs in Ohio. Now, owing to Mr. Squire's personal efforts, and splendid organizing ability, there are 650 good working clubs in this state. Even Squire's implacable enemy, Clarence Brown, must admit that this is a record worthy of emulation.

The confidence which John Sherman expresses in his own re-election must be provokingly confounding to his enemies. He publicly says he will win and absolves the members elect from secrecy, inviting those who are for him to plainly say so. He says Foraker is deceived about the true situation and in a homely way likens the Foraker crowd to the jockey who "bet on the sorrel horse when he really intended to bet on the bay."

Rev. Washington Gladden in his sermon in his pulpit in Columbus Sunday evening took occasion to correct Mr. McKinley's figures, presented in his campaign speeches. Mr. McKinley said there were only 90,000 paupers in the United States. Rev. Gladden finds on the roll of the official almoner of Columbus the names of 12,000 persons, besides which there are 44,000 in Ohio poor-houses. He refuses to believe that Ohio has one-half of the paupers in the United States.

Henry Clay's friends thought he might have been elected president if he had not written so many letters. So Charley Griffin's friends will shortly say he might have been elected speaker if he had kept his mouth shut more. He is racing up and down the newspaper columns telling the people how his colleagues will disgrace themselves if they do not do as he wants them to do. It is the growing opinion that our Charley is becoming considerable of a peanut politician.

Congressmen Mills and Springer, who are candidates for speaker of the house, do not agree on the tariff legislation for the democrats to advocate. Mills wants to prepare a new bill based on the democratic idea of tariff for revenue. He favors free wool, free raw materials for New England, free sugar without the bounty clause, and a complete revision of the law. Mr. Springer simply favors extending the free list. There is a distinction with a slight difference in these plans, but they are both democratic.

The Toledo Blade, which is anchored to the ghost of a hate, complains because the democratic papers express confidence in the election of John Sherman. This is the year when the democrats sit in the gallery and look down in the arena upon the show as it really is. They see a deal of a kicking of dust, and a big hullabaloo where the Foraker boys are, but they observe the quiet determination of the Sherman fellows and believe Uncle John will win. Hence the democratic papers print the news as they find it. They are not blinded by prejudice.

The season of 1891 will be remembered as the stormiest sea year of the decade. It is estimated by marine underwriters that over $20,000,000 worth of shipping was destroyed in the months of September and October and ninety lives lost. While this is a fearful record, the loss of life, when the risks on small barks, fishing boats and coasters are considered, is comparatively small. One railway accident will kill and maim as many as went down in the two fearful months of storm at sea, all told. With the countless and yearly increasing multitudes that cross and recross, the immunity from loss of life by wreck, storm, fire, fog and collision is quite wonderful. What the world owes to its brave and hardy seamen, the world only half realizes.

It becomes a question of veracity: The Hon. Charles P. Griffin having denied the correctness of the remarkable interview in which he was reported as having called his colleague, Mr. Flickinger, a "hound" and a "perjuring scoundrel," the reporter, Mr. W. K. Cochran, makes affidavit to the truthfulness of the printed statement. As between the two we are bound to believe the reporter. It is a very common thing in this town for men to deny their own statements when they read them in cold type. The reporter is a handy fellow on whom to shoulder blame and heap abuse, whereas, as a rule, the reporters can have no object in misrepresenting men or things. They are not employed for that purpose. Mr. Griffin is making a miscellaneous ass of himself in his scramble for speaker, and if he fails he will have only himself to blame. The expression of this belief is not intended to be offensively personal, but it is a fact that does not require substantiation by affidavit.

MORE AGITATION.

After the first year, when the duty on flour will be removed, exports to Havana will be counted by hundreds of thousands of barrels.—Cincinnati Commercial-Gazette.

And this is what happens when the duty on a commodity is removed; trade is immeasurably increased. Another thing happens when the duty is removed; prices come down, as witness, sugar. Republican campaign orators tell us how many tens of millions of dollars are saved to the consumer by the removal of this tax. Well and good; all the glory the McKinley tariff law has accomplished or can hope to accomplish is due to the little free trade rent made by Blaine in the prohibitory measure. What is the effect of it where the McKinley part is in force, unaided by the Blaine portion is thus noted by the Ohio State Journal, another high-tax organ (quoting the London News):

The decrease of 20 per cent. in our trade with America may fairly be attributed to the McKinley law.

And then the Journal says, exultingly, "let Ohio democrats cut this out and paste it in their hats."

Just why it's a glorious thing to shut off trade with one country, the one with which we naturally do the greatest amount of exchange business, and increase trade with a small island of the sea belongng to another empire, is not easy of explanation; except that the first-mentioned is England and hatred of the mother country is lately adopted into the republican creed, almost taking the place of hatred of the south, as a tenet of the faith.

The oddest feature of it all is the blind glorification of the McKinley bill by its tom-fool admirers, crediting it with power to increase prices to the purchaser and to decrease prices to the consumer at one and the same time; to shut out foreign goods and to increase their importation at one and the same time; to benefit American labor by causing strikes and reduction of wages while foreign contract labor—the "pauper labor" we hear so much about—is pouring into the mills and factories; by taking the tax from sugar because sugar cannot be produced in quantities sufficient in this country to supply the home demand, and paying a bounty on sugar to the end that we may eventually produce all that we use—all these things that the wonderful McKinley law will do are taken straight from high republican authority. What wonder that the author, that is, the clerical author, of it all (for be it borne in mind the bill was formulated by the monopolists whom it benefits) declares he is very tired of hearing about it and desires to talk about something else—anything else; silver for instance. But Mr. Blaine, flushed with the present-moment apparent success of his free-trade attachment, is anxious it shall be agitated and in this instance the democrats are unanimous with him. If an understanding of the revivifying effect of unrestricted trade on the commerce of the country can be brought to deaf ears and blind eyes by way of this roundabout, expensive experiment, better so than not at all. And Bro. McKinley and his little organ echoes are hereby notified that the agitation is only begun. He got through in the last election by the skin of his teeth and the tapping of the barrels into which his law pours increase, but that doesn't settle the matter for the people by any manner of means. His plea that he is "tired of it" is very pathetic, but the study of the question must and will go on. The tariff will be the issue of 1892 when it will be seen if monopoly shall rule, and if the farmer will still elect to wear his blindfold and be led by the worst sophistry on record in the political history of any country.

STILETTO POLITICS.

With the caption "Let Us Have Two Republican Senators from Ohio" the Commercial Gazette undisguisedly undertakes to prepare the way for the complete collapse of the Foraker movement. We say "undisguisedly," though the editorial is cloaked to hide the stiletto that is concealed beneath. Senator Sherman is called upon to attack Senator Brice's certificate. That is the first step. Then Foraker is advised to await developments and proudly take the seat which the United States senate is called upon to refuse to Mr. Brice. First elect Sherman, then Foraker—this is the advice of the Commercial Gazette. No person knows better than the C. G. folks that no valid objection to Senator Brice's certificate will be presented to the United States senate. The C. G. isn't fool enough to think the certificate will be rejected or that he will be unseated. It does, however, begin to rightly read the business sentiment of the state in favor of the re-election of Senator Sherman and it is getting ready to drop Mr. Foraker. Indeed, it begins to be apparent that the C. G. was dissembling while it was playing with the Foraker boom, and that in reality it was a Sherman organ all the time. The only republican thing that sincerely opposes Sherman is the ghost of Dave Locke's hate, and that doesn't amount to much in Ohio republican politics.

Will Be Decidedly Sharp.

Two of the representatives elect in Lucas county, hitherto credited to Gov. Foraker, have announced themselves for John Sherman, as also has Williams, of Williams county, also claimed for Foraker. Griffin, of Lucas, is non-committal because he is a candidate for speaker, but he is, doubtless, for Foraker. According to surface appearances the contest will be decidedly sharp.—Dayton Journal.

Let the Other Fellow Speak.

Gov.-elect Flower's declaration that he contributed only $5,000, directly or indirectly, to the democratic campaign fund in New York, is something of an eye-opener to those who have supposed that he was nominated on account of his bar'l. The declaration is duly sworn to, however, and Mr. Flower is generally rated an honorable man. Now let's hear from Mr. Fassett.—Boston Herald.

Walks Anear the Soup.

The turkey struts pompously around and talks hifalutingly to his mates, while he knows not aught of Thanksgiving, nor yet of the cranberry; and so Foraker, unmindful of fate spreads out his fine feathers, gobbles loudly and walks anear the soup.—Youngstown Vindicator.

The Wish of a Neighbor.

Secretary Foster is said to be exceedingly happy over the result of last week. As a compromise candidate for the U. S. senate, Charley may knock the persimmons and we sincerely hope he will.—Fostoria Democrat.

Sizing 'Em Up.

John Sherman will be re-elected in spite of all the rag-tag and bob-tail of politics.—Cleveland Leader.

THE SENATORIAL SCRAMBLE

Col. Smead's Plain Talk About Flickinger.

Kent Hamilton's Dilemma—What is Known of McConica's Promises.

The position of the republican representatives on the senatorial question is still a matter of comment and wonder, and it seems hard to tell for a certainty where they stand. It is claimed by some that Hon. Charles A. Flickinger was nominated as a Foraker man and Jacob Romeis says he so pledged himself. In this connection Col. Isaac D. Smead comes to the front, and in this morning's Cincinnati Commercial-Gazette has the following to say of Mr. Flickinger:

"What do I know about Mr. Flickinger's position on the senatorial question? Just this: At the county convention he came and called me aside saying "I understand that you have been informed that if I am nominated and elected I shall favor the re-election of Senator Sherman." To this I assented, and in a very emphatic manner he stated that it was absolutely false, that he was favorable to the election of Governor Foraker and referred me to Hon. Jacob Romeis, who is well known to be anti-Sherman. Mr. Romeis confirmed the statements made by Mr. Flickinger and made the speech nominating him as representative. I voted for him in the convention, and during the campaign did all I could for his election. Since last Tuesday I have heard all sorts of statements made concerning his position, but he has assured me in a most positive manner that he is in favor of the election of Governor Foraker. Should he vote for anybody else he will deceive some of the best friends he ever had and in my judgment vote contrary to the wishes of seven-eighths of the republicans of Lucas county."

This further complicates matters, and will be another cause for Mr. Flickinger to rise and explain. Foraker's friends around Toledo don't give up a point very easily, and Mr. Flickinger may have his hands full before he gets through.

M'CONICA'S PLEDGE.

He Promised T. H. Tracy to Stay by Foraker.

The apparent flop of Senator McConica into the Sherman camp has caused considerable comment among the Forakerites. It appears that before and after the nomination Mr. McConica gave his solemn promise to stand by Foraker first and last and all the time.

"Mr. McConica promised me personally to vote for Mr. Foraker," said Mr. T. H. Tracy last evening to a Bee.

"Will you allow me to say so publicly "

"Why, certainly. I am not the only one to whom he made the same promise."

And yet—and yet, it looks as if it was another case of a broken pledge.

HELD TO ACCOUNT.

Why J. Kent Hamilton Stood Sponser for Heller.

Ex-Mayor Hamilton is in hot water, so to speak, over the fact that Heller has [illegible] over to Sherman body and breeches. [illegible] Hamilton is the one man of all [illegible] responsible for the nomination of [illegible] Heller. [illegible] Hamilton made a personal canvass [illegible] tion and vouched for Heller's [illegible] Foraker.

Mr. Heller's emphatic flop was a paralyzer to Mr. Hamilton and his friends, and the ex-mayor is being hauled pretty thoroughly over the coals for his failure to deliver the goods.

THE HUMANE SOCIETY.

Meeting Last Evening—Reports Read and Business Transacted.

The regular meeting of the Humane society was held last night at the headquarters on Adams street. In the absence of President James M. Brown Mr. O. S. Bond officiated.

Mrs. R. G. Bacon, chairman of the children's committee, read her report presenting some interesting facts regarding the little ones under her supervision. She found 84 children at the home and all in a healthy condition. A committee consisting of Mrs. Judge Howe, Mrs. Major Hopkins and Mrs. Bacon visited the home recently for the purpose of ascertaining the number of orphan children found there with a view of making each a Christmas gift. The committee found 22 soldiers' orphans, and these little ones will be sure of a happy Christmas.

Mrs. Bacon tells the Bee that while the 27 cents per day, paid by the Xenia home for the orphans, meets the requirement for food, no provision is made for their clothing. She thinks they should be also clothed from the Xenia home fund, as the county appropriation is barely enough for the remaining charges.

Mr. Rundell reported for the committee appointed to call on the commissioners and state to them that "at least one woman, a member of the Humane society, should be appointed as a member of the advisory board" of the Children's home, and that the appointment made by that board would not hold. L. G. Richardson made the same report.

Mr. Rundell said Messrs. Cook and Pray were willing to do anything that seemed right and for the best; he inferred that Engelhardt was the man who wanted things his own way in defiance of the law's requirements.

While there is no objection, whatever, to the committee appointed by the commissioners, it is an insult to the women who were instrumental in having the bill presented by Hon. Chas. Griffin providing for that committee, women, two of whom have given their time and means since the organization of the Humane society to the work. The women who were appointed acknowledge they know nothing of the requirements and themselves desire legal appointments made.

The report of the work by Mr. France showed a faithful month's service. The record in brief is as follows:

Relief furnished, 1; cruelty to children, cases reported, 12; cruelty to wife and family, 13; conviction for cruelty to children, 3; conviction for cruelty to wife and family, 5; admonitions for cruelty to children, 7; investigations of cruelty to wife not sustained, 7; investigations of cruelty to wife and family not sustained, 1; charges withdrawn by wife, 2; taken to Lancaster, 1; taken to the insane asylum, 1; taken home to Detroit, 1; abuse to animals, 2. Two lame horses, 1 deceased horse, 1 crippled horse and 4 horses which were shot, were taken care of.

Adjourned until the second Tuesday in December.

OHIO ALLIANCE.

Columbus, O., Nov. 11.—The State Farmers' Alliance and Industrial union met here in annual session yesterday with about 40 delegates in attendance. One of the most notable features of the session was the annual address of President Alva Ogee. In the course of his exhaustive treatise on the objects and aims of the alliance, President Ogee warned his audience against the danger of the organization becoming a distinctive political factor.

THE HUNDRED MILE RACE.

Wauseon, Nov. 11.—(Special)—Owing to rain the race for $1,000 of one hundred miles in ten hours, which was to have taken place yesterday, was postponed for a week, and will come off probably the middle of next week. Donner and friends are confident of the little mare's ability to make the time, and all sports who may doubt it can, financially speaking, be accommodated.

CONNECTICUT CASES.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 11.—Judge Thayer to-day postponed the case of Sanger vs. Henry until Dec. 8, saying he did not think it advisable to pass upon the case (which involves the title to the office of state treasurer) until the supreme court has passed upon the governorship.

W. J. HANCOCK DEAD.

New York, Nov. 11.—W. J. Hancock, superintendent of the Atlantic division of Wells Fargo & Co.'s express, died early this morning.

In a half column of local items printed last week in a North Carolina newspaper in a town of 3,000 inhabitants nine colonels were mentioned, all residents of the town.

MENTIONED ON THE STREETS.

That Kerlin Bros. are putting in [illegible] work on the city gas lines.

That Gen. J. W. Greene will be a [illegible]didate for mayor on the next trip.

That Dr. W. W. Jones has got a promising trotter on his Michigan farm.

That the cost of the republican campaign in Lucas county alone was $15,000.

That there will be a catastrophe at the Perry street bridge one of these fine days.

That August Machen is one of the shrewdest oil men in northwestern Ohio.

That Clarence Brown is very tired of the gas board, and is thinking of resigning.

That the girls kick vigorously against a reduction of wages at Roth & Friedman's.

That Dave Hanner will be a candidate for councilman in the Third ward next spring.

That Geo. H. Ketcham proposes killing several hundred quail on his farm some day this week.

That John Sherman is the choice of the business men of Toledo for United States senator.

That Superintendent O'Herron, of the city gas department, is the right man in the right place.

That Postmaster Brown has already secured 60,000 names for the new post-office directory.

That the Burnett is on the boom, and is doing a thriving business under the new management.

That Auburndalians are becoming reconciled to ,the fact that they have been taken in and done for.

That Armstrong & Clarke are lively pushers in the grocery trade, as witness the first page of the Bee.

That the price of real estate on Canton avenue has increased in value fully 50 per cent. in the last year.

That W. I. Squire will be the next state railroad commissioner, and that a southern Ohio man will be labor commissioner.

That Chas. P. Griffin has lost any chance he may have had to secure the speakership by his attack on his colleague, Mr. Flickinger.

That the federal building is the headquarters of the Sherman forces in northwestern Ohio, and strict tab is kept on the newly-elected senators and representatives.

LIVED A CENTURY THROUGH,

And Died Fighting for Her Daughter's Ill-Gotten Gains.

Close of Life History That Had Much of Romance and Sorrow in It.

San Francisco, Nov. 11.—From our beautiful little sister city of Alameda, just across the Bay of San Francisco, comes coupled with a death a romantic life story.

Mrs. Bridget Cunningham died in Alameda last night at the age of 107. Her life flickered out like an empty lamp, and the romances that have closed with her existence are so tangled that no man can ever chronicle them correctly. They stretch over two continents.

The old woman herself gave the life of one of the characters immortalized by Charles Lever. One of her daughters was murdered but a few years ago in New Orleans by Treville E. Sykes, the scion of one of Louisiana's oldest families. He had thrust her into the mire and she had dragged him down with her. He shot her and the centenarian mother and the septuagenarian brother were fighting for the dead woman's ill-gotten thousands, when death took the mother across the boundary to join her daughter, Kate Townsend, of New Orleans.

For Kate Townsend was Bridget Cunningham the younger, and Bridget Cunningham the elder was the contesting heir to the diamonds and dollars of her dead child.

The Bridget Cunningham that died last night was born in Galway, Ireland, in 1874. Time was when she could sit and talk about "the days of '98," but that was long ago. It is years since age drew a cloud over her memory, and the old fights in Connaught and the greater convulsions in this freer land three decades back became all one jumbled tangle in her brain.

She mxed up those sunny days when Tim Cunningham—that same boy that Lever told about in the story of "Tom Burke of Ours"—came courting Bridget Mitchell, like the other Connemara boys, with those darker times in 1861-64, when her own sons went out to fight for their adopted land, and when her boy Larry lay dead on the field at Bull Run, and when Willie went out with the soldiers and never came back.

The mother never knew his fate. She was over 70 years old then, and they told her that Larry was shot by the confederates. There were other children, too; there was her son Timothy, the eldest boy, called after her father, and it was in his squalid shanty that Bridget died last night. Then there were three others, all dead or forgotten, and then there was the girl Bridget. Bridget went off and married a sailor in New Orleans a short time after the family came to California in 1869, and of her later history the less said the better. Sykes murdered her and she left him a fortune in her will. "Kate Townsend's" mother was fighting for that fortune when her last call came.

COUSINS WILL CONTEST.

Sequel to a Romantic Death Bed Marriage in Maine.

Bangor, Me., Nov. 11.—The recent death-bed marriage of Miss Kate Norcross, of Charleston, Me., to L. P. Rollins, of Brooklyn, will result in a lawsuit over her will.

Miss Norcross was married a few weeks ago in Roxbury district, Boston, to Mr. Rollins, who is a traveling salesman. The ceremony was performed at her request only a few hours before her death in order that she might bequeath to her husband all her property, estimated at $150,000.

The will was filed in the Middlesex probate court, and at the same time a lawyer filed the necessary papers for a suit to contest its validity on the ground of undue influence. Twelve cousins are interested in the contest.

DRIVEN TO DEATH.

Sad Scenes Among Russia's Starving Poor.

A Woman, Unable to Get Food From A Rich Neighbor, Kills Her Three Children and Herself.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 11.—Terrible scenes are reported from the famine districts.

At Chelabink, a woman killed her three children and then hanged herself upon being refused a small loan of money by a rich neighbor in order to buy food for herself and her famishing babies.

G. A. R. ENCAMPMENT DATE.

Washington, Nov. 11.—The citizen's executive committee on the national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic to be held in Washington next year, has decided to recommend the second week of October as the date for holding the encampment and this action will be laid for approval before Commander-in-Chief Palmer and the national council of administration at a meeting here to-morrow.

LACEY IN WASHINGTON.

Washington, Nov. 11.—Comptroller Lacey has returned from Boston where he has been giving his personal attention to the affairs of the Maverick national bank. He states that none of the Boston banks are affected by the failure of the Maverick bank, and that careful inquiry developed the fact that none of the state or interior banks will be embarrassed.

ROBSON, THE ACTOR, MARRIED.

New York, Nov. 11.—Stuart Robson, the actor, was married at the city hall to Mary Waldron, the actress.

WILL ARBITRATE MATTERS.

Salisbury and Blaine Will Get Together.

A Treaty Ready for the Senate By Which Both Countries' Rights in Bering Sea Can Be Determined.

Washington, Nov. 11.—(Special —During the arguments in the supreme court in the Sayward case yesterday it developed that the United States and England had agreed, subject to ratification by the senate, to arbitrate the differences arising out of the Bering sea control.

The inference drawn from the developments to-day (including the statement made by the attorney-general) is that the president will submit to the senate an agreement in the nature of a treaty between the United States and Great Britain by which the parties bind themselves to accept as final and conclusive the definition to be given by the arbitrators of the exact rights of the United States in Bering sea, as well as to pay any awards of damages suffered by the nation that is declared to have had the true contention. It is also presumed that arbitrators have been selected, but none of the officials seen would discuss the details of the agreement, doubtless for the reason that it has to be submitted to the senate for ratification, and therefore comes under the executive session rules of the senate, which require secrecy to be observed.

THE SCHOOL LAW.

Children To Be Taken Into the Mines For Work.

Columbus, O., Nov. 11.—Yesterday Bishop Watterson, accompanied by Rev. Father Wissinger, of New Straitsville, called upon the state commissioner of public schools to get an opinion on the truant laws.

There are in Father Wissinger's parish many children whose parents are miners and who are taken out of school during the busy season to work in the mines.

The law requires that every child of proper age shall attend school, either public, parochial or private, 16 weeks in the year, eight of which shall be consecutive.

The mine owners put the construction upon the law that the entire 16 weeks should be consecutive and refused to give them employment, until the school commissioner passed upon the law, for fear they would be prosecuted.

The commissioner's decision was that after the eight consecutive weeks had been put in the children could be taken out, providing the eight remaining weeks of schooling were had before the expiration of the year.

MORE TROUBLE IN ECUADOR.

Riots Occur at the Guayaquil Elections.

Police Open Fire on the Crowds, Wound Several People and Create a Feeling of Uneasiness.

New York, Nov. 11.—A special cable dispatch to the Herald from Guayaquil, Ecuador, says municipal elections were commenced in that city on November 7 and have been attended with bitter political feuds which have caused intense excitement, and at length led to bloodshed.

Street fights were frequent, but, as the people were unarmed, no serious results followed until the police took part in the row.

Without warning they opened fire upon the populace and wounded several persons.

The action of the police created great excitement, and further trouble is feared. Business has been entirely suspended owing to the general spirit of uneasiness afloat.

MAY HAVE BEEN MURDERED.

A Suicide Story Not Credited by the People.

Dublin, Nov. 11.—The news of what appears to be a sensational suicide or possible murder involving an aristocratic family has been received here.

According to the report telegraphed here, Miss Rosa Lawless, the sister of Lord Clancurry, has been found drowned in the lake on her brother's estate, at Clancurry, County Kildare.

There seems to be considerable mystery surrounding the whole affair, disappointment in love and ill-health being mentioned as the cause for the suicide, if such it should turn out to be, for naturally there are other rumors afloat.

JUDGMENT OF OUSTER.

Columbus, O., Nov. 11.—The supreme court has decided what is known as the "Lebanon liquor cases," in which suits were instituted to revoke the charter of the Broadway and Sanhedrian clubs of the village mentioned. These clubs were incorporated as literary associations, but proved to be only for the purpose of furnishing liquor to their members in violation of the local option law. The attorney general instituted suit to oust them from the privileges enjoyed under the incorporation laws, and the court renders judgment of ouster in each case.

FARMERS IN SESSION.

Sedalia, Mo., Nov. 11.—The eleventh annual session of the National Farmers' congress met here yesterday. There could be no mistake in the character of the assembly. Wood's opera house, the place of meeting, was handsomely decorated with various agricultural products, sheaves of grain, immense stalks of corn, pumpkins like barrels, and ears of corn as big as one's arm.

There were 200 delegates present, representing 30 different states.

GOLD BRICK SWINDLE.

Troy, N. Y., Nov. 11.—It is reported that a gold brick swindle was perpetrated last week on a resident of Hampton Corners, Washington county. The Hampton men lent $6,000 on the brick, which was represented to be worth $10,000. It was assayed by a member of the gang who was represented to be the Vermont state assayer. The real value of the brick was about $1.

NO MORE BURIALS AT SEA.

Steel caskets for the bodies of those who die suddenly on shipboard are being carried on many of the trans-Atlantic liners. The remains are placed in them and hermetically sealed. The heartless practice of throwing the remains overboard is considered worse than barbarous, especially when a vessel is within a few miles of land. Bodies, when weighted, only sink a few feet below the surface of the water, where they are soon attacked by the fish and sharks, and reappear on the surface of the water within 48 hours. The body of the wife of a rich New Yorker, thrown overboard from a Vera Cruz steamer a few months ago, drifted ashore on the coast of Mexico and was seen for two weeks afterward, until robbed and sunk by bandits for the finger-rings.—Philadelphia Record.

A PATHETIC STORY.

A very pathetic story is attached to the death of 7-year old Annie Keefe, of Port Chester, N. Y. She was playing "follow the leader," her pet dog being with her, and in scaling a picket fence she fel forward on the pavement, her curly head striking the curbstone. A playmate ran to pick the little girl up, when she opened her eyes. Seeing her pet dog beside her she raised herself up, and, putting her arms around his neck, said: "O, Dick, good-by, Dick! Good-by, old fellow." Then the little arms unclasped and the child fell back dead. Her skull had been fractured.

NEW ALLOYS.

Seven new alloys have been invented recently. They are nickel-aluminium, for decorative threads; zinc-nickel, for a pigment; nickel-hardlied, for type; platinide, composed of platinum, nickel, gold, and iron, for crucibles and chemical utensils; roseine, composed of nickel, silver, aluminium, and tin, for jeweler's work; sunbronze, composed of cobalt, aluminium, and copper; metalline, composed of cobalt, aluminium, iron and copper.

BANK OF ENGLAND NOTES.

Made by a Huguenot Family for One Hundred and Fifty Years.

Bank of England notes are made from new white linen cuttings—never from anything that has been worn. So carefully is the paper prepared that even the number of dips into the pulp made by each workman is registered on a dial by machinery, and the sheets are counted and booked to each person through whose hands they pass. They are made at Laverstoke, on the river Whit, in Hampshire, by a family named Portal, descended from a French Huguenot refugee, and have been made by the same family for more than 150 years.—American Pressman.

SOLDERED HIS EYELIDS TOGETHER.

A Bangor plumber met with a very peculiar accident while at work on the West Side yesterday morning. He was using some solder in a gutter and did not notice that there was a little water in it. The moment that he applied the melted metal it snapped and flew. One piece of it came directly for his eye, and the lids closed involuntarily as the solder struck. They closed the moment of the contact, and as it rested upon the lashes it soldered the lids together so firmly that it was impossible to move them. The eye was not injured in the slightest but it was effectually closed. The victim was half amused at the ridiculous side of the affair, and wanted to go to a barber and have the eye cut open, but a companion took him to Dr. Edmunds, who severed the lashes and removed the metal fastening, so that the plumber is now using both eyes again. But there are no lashes left to intercept the next flight of hot solder.

HOW THE TOMATO WAS NAMED.

Few persons know the origin of this common name. It originated in this way: The earlier experimenters with the fruit believed that it had a great effect on the spleen—that is to say, it made persons liable to crossness good natured—gave them, so to speak, a lovely disposition, and for this reason the plant was known to the ancient Spaniards as the love apple. By the name of love apple it is still known in many English-speaking countries. The word tomato is derived from the same source, that is to say, from the original Latin word amo, to love, although we use it now as a Spanish derivative, tomato being a Spanish expression.—Meehan's Monthly.

Pa—It means, my son, that they are to enter life upon the share-and-share-alike principle. He will take all the joys and let her have all the sorrows.—Boston Transcript.

A WOMAN IN IT.

Every young man to have a home must have a wife. He can never substitute a boarding place, a club, or a hotel for a home. This is to go through life hanging upon the skirts of life, leading a joyless, selfish, unnatural and unpatriotic existence. God putteth the solitary in families. It is the best provision He can make for their usefulness and welfare. This divine arrangement cannot be set aside, or improved upon, or written down as a "failure." Young men and women are still to marry, build homes, rear families, plant gardens, and eat the fruit of them, marry when young, even though poor, join hands and hearts, and climb the hill together; they will reach the summit all the more surely and quickly.—New England Magazine for November.

CHEATING IN HORSE BLANKETS

Nearly every pattern of 5/A Horse Blanket is imitated in color and style. In most cases the imitation looks just as good as the genuine, but it hasn't the warp threads, and so lacks strength, and while it sells for only a little less than the genuine it isn't worth one-half as much. The fact that 5/A Horse Blankets are copied is strong evidence that they are THE STANDARD, and every buyer should see that the 5/A trade mark is sewed on the inside of the Blanket.

MRS. GRAHAM'S

Cucumber and Elder Flower Cream

Is not a cosmetic in the sence in which that term is popularly used, but permanently beautifies. It creates a soft, smooth, clear, velvety skin, and by daily use gradually makes the complexion several shades whiter. It is a constant protection from the effects of sun and wind and prevents sunburn and freckles, and blackheads will never come while you use it. It cleanses the face far better than soap and water, nourishes and builds up the skin tissues and thus prevents the formation of wrinkles. It gives the freshness, clearness and smoothness of skin that you had when a little girl. Every lady, young or old, ought to use it, as it gives a more youthful appearance to any lady, and that permanently. It contains no acid, powder or alkali, and is as harmless as dew and as nourishing to the skin as dew is to the flower. Price $1.00. Ask your druggist for it.

SAMPLE BOTTLE mailed free to any lady on receipt of 10 cents in stamps to pay for postage and packing. Lady Agents wanted.

EVOLUTION UP TO DATE.

Evolution, they say! We have climbed from the beast;
We have silenced the battle-god's clamor;
Our warfare has ceased and our welfare increased,
Since we turned to the ploughshare and hammer!
Look back on the ages when clan warred with clan,
And the strongest was lord o'er his neighbor!
See now how the greater advancement of man
Is evolved from the blessings of labor!

Hark! the bells of a peaceful religion peal out,
Like the voices of God, from each steeple;
And yonder, in God's name, the scourge and the knout
Are the lot of a famine-struck people!
Oh, yes! we have neared our perfection at length,
There is peace between nation and nation;
And bondholders, watching the balance of strength,
May indulge in discreet speculation!

Evolution and civilization, they say!
Dearth and famine, forsooth?—they are trifles!
We live in the dawn of milennial day:
And the czar wants a million new rifles!
Religion has stretched out her world-shielding arms!
We have peace in our days!
Stuff and gammon!
Our peace is the prelude to war's wild alarms!
Our religion the worship of mammon!

The earthquake, says the Napa (Cal.) Register, was very severe in Sonoma. From a very small spring on the road near town which had previously been but a little more than a moist spot, now gushes forth a stream so great that ditches had to be cut to carry away the water. In the artesian wells there the flow is much greater than formerly, the water spouting high in some places.

A new kind of a bird has been discovered in Wyoming. In company with a dozen buzzards it was hovering over the carcass of a dead horse in a pasture. It has the head and beak of a hoot owl, the body and neck of a rooster and its tail is similar to that of a peacock, and when shot made a noise not unlike that of a guinea hen. The bird will prove an interesting study for scientists and has been shipped to New York city.

Over 16 years ago Nicholas Tyson, of Manistee, Mich., lost a pocketbook containing $7. A few days later the empty pocketbook was tossed into his wagon with a note saying that the money would be returned as soon as the finder could afford it. The other day Mr. Tyson received an anonymous note reading: "Here is your $7. I spent the money and never was able to give it back until now. Much obliged for the use of it."

Check cutters of stained ivory and silver are now made for those that care to pay $250 for such trifles. A few rich men and perhaps a good many rich women delight in costly appointments for the writing desk, and to meet this demand those that cater to the whims of the wealthy have taken to overloading all sorts of stationery articles with costly workmanship. A fully equipped desk outfit of this sort runs up into the thousands of dollars.

CAUGHT AT LAST.

How Deserted Families' Interests Are Looked After.

Men Who Desert Their Wives and Children Followed to the Ends of the Earth.

Infirmary Director William Kirkby has just located in San Diego, California, a man named Fred Stultz. This man deserted his wife and family in this city over two years ago and left them for the city to support. Since that time the authorities have been on the lookout for the delinquent husband, and have tracked him from one place to another until at last they have found him on the other side of the continent. Stultz is manager of the San Diego bill posting agency, and in that city is considered a sober, industrious and respectable citizen.

He will no doubt be somewhat surprised when the officers out there pounce down upon him and compel him to do something for his long neglected family here in Toledo.

The infirmary are also after another man who deserted his family here and is supposed to have gone to California. It is feared that this man has continued his way west and gone to Australia.

"It don't make any difference if he has," said Mr. Kirkby, "we will follow him, even to the ends of the earth, and sooner or later he will be hauled up and emphatically reminded of the family he left behind. Not many of those felows get away from us, even if they do lead us a long dance."

As the Bee expressed some surprise at such a system for the protection of helpless wives and children, Mr. Kirkby continued:

"Yes, it is a good system and costs very little—only postage and telegraphing. The infirmary and police departments and humane societies, where such organizations exist, always look these cases up whenever notified of the circumstances and always bring the man to time if he is found. They do this for humanity's sake, and we do the same for them, so the score is about even. We have caught several fellows in Germany and other European countries and made them send money for their destitute families. We have also dropped onto several men in this city who left families abroad and they have always been brought to time.

"Some time ago a man deserted his family here and went to Memphis. He got a good situation and was making money but sent none to his family, and we were obliged to support them. I found out where he was and how he was located, and simply sent a letter to the chief of police relating the circumstances of the case. Soon after the wife received a check for $50 from her husband and we have never been obliged to assist that family since. I did not tell the wife what I had done, for you can not depend on a woman, even when wronged, if she thinks her husband is in trouble. The chief of police at Memphis did not tell the man where he got his information, and so I was not known in the transaction at all by the parties most interested, but the desired end was brought about just the same.

"We had a case of another man who was in the habit of leaving his family here every fall and going south for the winter. He would do nothing for his wife and children during the cold weather and so we were obliged to assist them. I finally located him at St. Louis and sent word to the chief of police of that city and he gave the word to his men all over the city to be on the lookout for him. Next day he was brought before the chief and at first flatly refused to do anything for his family. Finally he promised to help them, and as the authorities down there could not place any charge against him he was released. As soon as he was out of the hands of the police he forgot his promises and did not send any money. He wrote to friends here that he would see them in hell first. I obtained this letter and sent it back to the chief at St. Louis. The order to arrest the man on sight had not been rescinded and he had been taken in by officers in different precincts several times. By the time my second letter reached St. Louis he was very much worried and when the chief called him 'on the carpet' he was willing to liquidate. The result was that the next day his family here received a message to go to St. Louis and a telegraph money order for the amount to get them there.

"Thus you will see that the way of the transgressor is hard, and he is pretty sure to be caught up sooner or later."

A MOTHER'S DISTRESS,

Is Turned Into the Most Unbounded Joy.

Failing in An Attempt to Drown Her Babe She Has It Baptized and Will Protect Her Offspring.

Philadelphia, Nov. 11.—(Special)—A pale, little woman with sorrowful face stood before the baptismal font in St. Stephen's church yesterday afternoon, holding tenderly a pretty little babe. Unutterable anguish was pictured upon the mother's countenance as she gazed into her darling's face.

The entire tragic past must have overwhelmed repentent Mary Hill as she clasped her infant, whom she had thrown with murderous hands into Ridley Creek at Eddystone on the night of July 13.

On Monday, July 13, Mary Hill stole away from Philadelphia, where she had been employed on South street as a servant, bearing her babe, then 3 weeks old, in her arms, bundled up closely as if to conceal it from sight.

She left the train at the Eddystone depot, and for an hour lingered about the tracks, pacing to and fro, as if nearly distracted. Then, wearily, she walked away in the direction of Chester. Woefully she covered the entire distance, and then, resolved to carry out her desperate plan, retraced her steps and wandered down to the bridge that spans Crum creek.

Suddenly she lifted her diminutive burden and hurled it into the water. She, too, would have jumped in after it, but was frightened away by the startled cries of two young men who happened to be bathing beneath the bridge. The baby's wrappings must have saved its life, for when one of the young men, Harry Conavan, rescued it from the water it was still living.

It was hastily restored and placed for shelter in the home of Mrs. John Hocking. The nearly prostrate mother was hunted out and identified.

Breaking completely down, she confessed her crime and begged for her baby again. This was refused, and she was put, weeping bitterly, into jail.

A trial ensued, but the jury was touched by her misfortune and she was acquited. Mary then went to Mrs. Hocking, and, after swearing fidelity to her babe, the little one was placed in her arms, and she has cared for it ever since.

Rev. Dr. S. D. McConnell's kindly eyes rested pityingly on the mother and babe yesterday as he stood beside the font, and very tenderly, indeed, did he perform the rite of christening the little one so dramatically saved. In the midst of the affecting ceremony the baby turned and looked at the minister solemnly pronouncing the service, giving it the name Ellen Hocking, and laid her little cheek affectionately against the Doctor's own. As the young mother received back her little one and passed out the shadow of sorrow passed from her face.

PLAYING-CARD FIGURES.

Few people know the significance of the figures in playing-cards. In olden times hearts represented "choirmen" or ecclesiastics, and the early cards of that suit have a cape, which in form resembled a heart. The spade was originally a pikehead, typifying the nobility of the soldiery. The artisans were represented by a stone tile, now known as a diamond. Farmers were represented by a trefoil, or clover leaf, now called a club. The four kings were originally David, Alexander, Caesar and Charlmagne, representing the four great monarchies. The queens were Argine, Judith, Esther and Pallas, representing birth, fortitude, piety and wisdom. The knaves were either knights or servants to knights.

AFTER THE BOYS.

How They Are Attended to at the Ashland Avenue Baptist Church.

The circle of King's Daughters of the Ashland Avenue Baptist church have organized a "Boys' League," composed of about 50 of the young boys of the Sunday school. The league meets every two weeks for instruction and entertainment. The second meeting was held last evening, when a cadet drill class was organized under the instruction of Mr. Charles O'Brien, and the boys were treated to a brief talk, accompanied with interesting experiments by Prof. Wm. McPherson, after which an hour was spent in entertainment.

FRANK DANIELS.

Where the Great Funny Man Was Discovered.

How He Pulled Hoyt's "Rag Baby" Out of the Fire and Made Success of Failure.

One of the most inimitable on the stage is Frank Daniels, who made his first pronounced hit in Hoyt's "Rag Baby," and thereby helped very materially to float Hoyt on to fortune. Daniels is now making himself rich with "Little Puck," which comes to Wheeler's to-night, but he doesn't concern himself with money-getting to the exclusion of passing enjoyment, as some players do. He is one of the jolliest, keenest, wittiest fellows to be found anywhere, and, off the stage or on, is a never-failing source of amusement to those about him. As popular as has been Daniels' success and as widely as he is known and admired, the public knows next to nothing about his early stage career, principally because the bright little star doesn't talk much about himself, but evades the subject, and when questioned flies off to a description of some quaint character encountered on his travels.

There is a popular impression to the effect that Hoyt ran across him down in New England in an amateur "Pinafore" company and put him in "A Rag Baby" and made him. This is slightly incorrect. For four or five years prior to the writing of "A Rag Baby" Daniels played with one of those jumbles of burlesque and opera and farce, from which farce-comedy sprung, called "The Electric Doll." They played all the one-night towns in the remote sections and did well—so well that they ventured into Chicago for a single performance one Sunday night. Then they went back to the country.

But they prospered, and one season they concuded to go to England, which was done forthwith, and nineteen weeks in the provinces were profitably played, after which they came back to America. "The Beggar Student" was then running at the Cassino, New York, and the manager of a Boston theatre had arranged to put it on at his house. He sent Daniels to New York to see the performance with a view to playing the part of the jailer. Daniels looked at the opera and could hardly find the jailor at all, the part was so small. After the show he telegraphed the Boston manager: "No jailor in it; let me play the jail."

He went back to Boston, however, and studied up the two little songs which the jailor has in the second act and the funny little bit of stage business, to which he added some of his own, and while the rest of the people rehearsed morning, afternoon and night he dropped in, rehearsed for five minutes and went away.

However, on the night of the first performance his comicality caught the crowded house, and at the end of the act, with the stage full of principals and chorus, there were five recalls. Daniels was not on, however, modestly assuming that not any of the uproar was for him, but on the fifth recall there were cries for "the jailor," and when he responded there was a tumult which demonstrated beyond question that the chubby little comedian had made a hit.

Hoyt was then a newspaper paragrapher. His first piece, A Bunch of Keys, had made a flat failure and had not been livened up and made the rollicking entertainment it afterwards became. Thomas, Hoyt's present partner, was a theater habitue that knew Daniels. Hoyt and Thomas saw The Beggar Student, and one afternoon they carried Daniels off to a secluded place and read A Rag Baby to him. They read again and even a third time, and though Daniels knitted his brows and listened attentively he couldn't for his life make out what it was all about, and said so. A few nights after, however, somebody in The Beggar Student cast objected to the share Daniels was having in the honors, and the bright little fun-maker was shoved in the back-ground. Hurt more by the spirit of jealousy which was making itself unpleasantly manifest than by the loss of glorification, Daniels went to the manager and said he would like to quit.

"You will have to give me two weeks' notice," said the manager.

"Two weeks' notice!" said Daniels. "The opera won't run more than two weeks longer. I want to quit now."

"Can't do it. Must give me two weeks' notice."

So Daniels remained the two weeks, and in the meantime arranged with Hoyt and Thomas to go out with A Rag Baby and play the part of Old Sport. The principal part, as the piece was originally written by Hoyt, was that of Tony Jay, the Old Sport was simply a character bit like the dude tramp and the policeman. The company started out, and the reception given the piece was what is called in theatrical parlance "a frost." Daniels caught the spirit of the Old Sport, however, and saw in it the making of a great character. He told Hoyt so, and he was given the privilege of making changes and building the part up. Still their experience was discouraging and Hoyt and Thomas were more than once disheartened. But Daniels would not give up. He introduced funny bits of business, worked up catchy lines and strung them through the play, and, in point of fact, made the piece the huge success it afterwards became.

The lines "I guess we'd better understand each other," and "You'd better get another boy," were introduced by Daniels as well as all the drollery connected therewith, which, as the playgoers remember, ran throughout the piece. When the character of Old Sport had been made the central one and the others brightened up and new music and innumerable bits of business stuck in here and there and everywhere, then A Rag Baby was a success, and the foundation for its owners' fortunes were laid.

VISITS THE POOR IN DISGUISE.

It is stated "on very good authority," that the Prince of Wales has decided that on his return to London he will take up and interest himself in, even more pronouncedly than he has hitherto done, the important question of the dwellings of the poor. The majority of the people know that the prince has always done much in this direction. In addition to presiding at conferences on the subject, his royal highness has figured as a champion "slummer." He has visited some of the most notorious quarters in the east end of the metropolis, peering into thieves' dens and other still more disreputable places, where filth and squalor have been painfully conspicuous. Of course, his royal highness has not been known at these places except to, perhaps, one individual who accompanied him; on more than one occasion he has not been content with donning shabby attire, but has assumed a wig and a false beard. The prince, however, apparently feels very keenly on the subject of the amelioration of the poorer classes and is extremely desirous to do his best on their behalf.

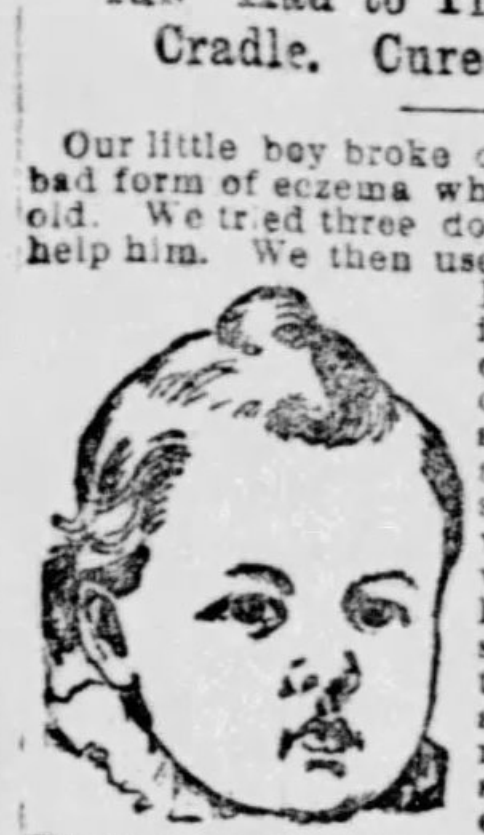
BAD ECZEMA ON BABY

Head One Solid Sore. Itching Awful. Had to Tie His Hands to Cradle. Cured by Cuticura.



Our little boy broke out on his head with a bad form of eczema when he was four months old. We tried three doctors, but they did not help him. We then used your three CUTICURA REMEDIES, and after using them eleven weeks exactly according to directions, he began to steadily improve, and after the use of them for seven months his head was entirely well. When we began using them his head was a solid sore from the crown to the eyebrows. It was also all over his ears, most of his face, and small places on different parts of his body. There were sixteen weeks that we had to keep his hands tied to the cradle and hold them when he was taken up, and had to keep mittens on his hands to keep his finger nails out of the sores, as he would scratch if he could in anyway get his hands loose. We know your CUTICURA REMEDIES cured him. We feel safe in recommending them to others.

BANG! BANG!! BANG!!!

The Quail Shooting Season Opens With a Rush.

As the Boys Would Say, the Woods Are Full of Them, and the Huntsmen Are Out In Force.

It is possible that the horn of the huntsman was not heard on the hills yesterday, but if it were not the crack of his rifle certainly was and that too at a very early hour.

Yesterday the season for quail shooting opened, and in the parlance of the small boy the woods are full of them, and not only the woods but the fields and pastures all around Toledo. The birds are so numerous that they have even invaded the villages and cities. Quite a number of flocks have been located within the city limits during the past month or two, and from all indications there are lots of fun in store for the huntsman.

J. T. Baskett, of Mexico, Mo., gives some interesting facts in the following article relative to quail and quail shooting:

If you have only one season in which to get away from business for a brief hunt, let it be in those beautiful days of October or early November that come each fall to every portion of our country. The later—before the severe snows fall—the better. The foilage has partly fallen from the brushy cover, the frost has trimmed the cornstalks of many blades, and the quail flocks have settled on definite grounds for the winter. Birds will be found now where you may expect them, and the stress of weather has not driven them too near the farmer's feed lot or among his herds.

Take with you a companion, courteous and congenial; if possible, one whose strength and gait are about as your own and one who does not "claim everything" in doubtful shots. It is better to have a dog each—but do not hunt them promiscuously, i. e., let one man control the same dog all the time. If you can, own your dog and do not lend him—much. By all means keep in good temper both with friend and dog. An angry hunter can no more shoot well than a dog with an angry master will hunt well.

The gun for quail should be light and well balanced, with rather a spreading pattern, and good penetration. About a seven and a half pound, thirty inch, double barrel, twelve bore is perhaps about the usual thing, though many now are using the Winchester repeaters with great success.

The writer has used nothing else for years, his only objection to it being that it shoots too closely for covert sporting, and is perhaps not so well balanced for quick work. Still he has no intention of giving it up, for if the birds straggle the least in getting up, more than a brace are apt to be bagged—sometimes four to six. The load must depend in a large measure upon the bore and weight of the gun, but for the size indicated, about three and a quarter drams of powder, and an ounce of shot will form a basis. Should you purchase your shells ready loaded and they read "an ounce and an eighth" the added eighth need not worry you, for it is not usually there. The Winchester goods however, the writer, has found by measurement, to contain what they are branded. The size of shot should be 8's in the early season, and 7's in the late. There are those, I know, who advocate numbers as low as 12's, but it takes an exceptional gun to kill with these, unless the range be short; and one should go prepared for all styles of shots. With his closely choked gun the writer kills many quail with three drams of powder, two wads, and three-fourths of an ounce of No. 8's.

Carry plenty of shells and take all kinds of chances. If you are going to feel bad about wasting shells stay at home and take pepsin. If in cover, and you cannot see well, shoot where you think the bird will be, and pull down close on to a quail in plain sight, 60 yards away. You may get neither, but if you kill one this way it affords as much pleasure as three shot near by in the open. You are not out altogether for meat, but sport, and no man can become a sportsman who takes only pot hunter's chances.

Quail are such rapid flyers and our movements so comparatively slow that we must shoot well ahead on cross shots and then let them "fly into it;" but how far ahead to hold depends upon so many factors that it takes experience after all. There is the speed of flight, the distance away, the method of aiming (i. e. whether we are following the bird with the aim or are taking a "snap shot"), and last of all the "personal equation." Some men's muscles obey the mind much quicker than others. The estimation of distances, too, is another doubtful element of the personal equation, just as some persons think the moon is as large as a wagon wheel, and others the size of a cheese. A learned professor of a school of technology in the east, has calculated from speed of shot and bird that a quail flying transversely 40 yards away moves nine feet while the shot charge passes 120. This may be so. I only know that if I held that far ahead of cross shots at that range I should kill few birds. I think within the usual range, taking the length of the flying bird at eight inches from 12 to 30 inches, as you "feel it" is perhaps about right, with an average of perhaps 16. A "straight away" bird is usually rising—so hold a little above for that, and also for a bird coming directly to you.

In choosing your day, if you can, do not select one just after a deep snow or with a drizzling mist falling. On the first the quail rarely move at all, and on the second they move all the time—either running before the dog like turkeys, or flying far ahead of the point, much of this kind of hunting will spoil the best of dogs. Simply damp days, however, are good, and fine sport can be had on old snows. Slight snowfalls enable one to find flocks readily by their tracks. But the day of days is the typical one of our Indian summer. If you are going to "make a day of it" be off early. If you have only half a day and can choose, take the afternoon, and do not leave the field till dark. The regathering of the flocks flushed early will afford many shots. When quail are plenty they may be looked for in the early season anywhere there is cover and food, but favorite places at such time as I mention are along the edge of corn fields bordering on brush, or dense weedy fallows. If there is a millet or buckwheat patch near, be sure to pass that way, and the sorghum and broom corn fields of the west are favorite grounds.

On our pariries the dense weedy drains or "draws" that run up through corn fields are perhaps, all in all, the favorite places. Next in favor is perhaps the region of a hedge fence. Along these latter places two hunters—one on each side—are almost a necessity, and perhaps no finer sport is afforded than that of a flock scattered down a hedge. Our railroads—since the decadence of the hedge and worm fence, are doing much to sustain and lead the quail further out from brushy cove. The angle of the old rail fence was a safe retreat for the nest, but the straight stretch of wire and plank has turned the plow into the birds persecuter.

The railroad sets a "thus far" to hoof and 'share and sifts a portion of its freightage out for food, so that many an Eastern quail, "like other people," is fed by western wheat. The quail may roost anywhere when out late, but a favorite place is the high ridges of the dense dead weeds, and as they usually walk away to feed it is well to throw the dogs well into these fallows in the early morn. The flock quite often rises and flies to the roosting place purposely to conceal the trail. The manner of roosting in a circle with the heads out like the spokes of a wheel is a well-known and wise precaution. They sit there and often allow themselves to be snowed under and sometimes, if the snowfall be heavy and continue the next day, they remain in the same place over a second night. Should sleet fall and freeze, the birds are doomed, and, some winters, extermination is threatened in this way.

Flight is the last means of a quail's escape—though I am satisfied that by inherited experience or the diminution of cover our quail fly quicker, further and with much less provocation thean formerly. Dr. Cones takes the ground that crouching in the history of this family is an acquired habit, but the fact that in progress from chick to adult wing development they crouch less and fly more would not bear this out. The crouching is a tacit acknowledgement of a short wing and a white and tender meated chest muscle. When the flesh of the young pinnated grouse becomes black it ceases to lie so well to the dog.

Should you fail to see where a flock of quail pitches, follow on directly in their line of flight, for they rarely change their course. Do not be in too great a hurry, for a little movement on their part will enable your dog to find them better. Perhaps few phenomena are better established in hunting science than the fact that this bird has the ability, just after being suddenly flushed, to prevent, for a short time, the giving out of its odor. Every old hunter will confirm this. I could give many interesting instances in my own experience had I the space. The bird seems conscious of this faculty and lies closer than usual, almost allowing itself to be trodden upon. But this does not account for all the facts. The only rational explanation is that the fright, as is well known with us, suppresses the secretions. A little quiet enables them to resume their normal condition and a dog can locate them.

The quail has the trick of getting up behind you after you pass, which is sometimes very confusing, so while I advocate the habit of always keeping near your dog when he is trailing, do not keep too near. It is well for a young dog to be trained to allow the hunter to walk in ahead of his point and flush the bird, but I can bag more birds when the dog flushes them. They are apt to run under the point and not get up when you expect them. Make your dog hunt very closely under the dead leaves of trees if you suspect a bird is there. Here it shuffles itself down to the earth and, not being able to see out, it often happens that nothing but a movement immediately over it will get it out. If your dog is not on a point do not wait too long because he is stanch. He may be, but the quail is not. Could you once see a bird under point in slight cover and notice the evidence of nervous strain, you would note that he must fly soon or die of suspense. Many a poor dog is punished for breaking point, when it was the bird that could not stand it no longer. Lastly, go dressed as lightly as the weather will permit, and keep cool in all senses of the word.

These articles are not written for the old hunter but should they enable some younger lads to acquire an accomplishment that will lead them away from damaging forms of entertainment and bring them in contact with nature in her better moods; or should they induce some older men to get respite from dyspepsia and take air and exercise instead of bismuth, they shall accomplish their mission.

WANDERING IN THE STREETS

Queer Actions of a Well-Dressed Woman.

She Has Plenty of Money and Is Evidently Not In Her Right Mind.

Elizabeth, N. J., Nov. 11.—The singular actions of a well-dressed woman here today excited the curiosity of the guests at the Sheridan house and Ryan's hotel.

She left a train at the union station Saturday night and appeared to be in a state of great nervous excitement. She ordered a cab and told the driver to take her quickly to the best hotel in town.

He took her to the Sheridan house, where she paid him and engaged a room, telling the hotel clerk, James Phillips, to write her name on the register, as she was too nervous to do it. She gave her name as Mrs. L. Ciglen, Princeton, N. J.

She drew forth a big roll of money from the bosom of her dress, from which she paid for the room. She retired to it, but remained there only about an hour, when she came downstairs, bade the clerk good-by, and went to Ryan's hotel and engaged another room and remained there all night.

To-day she was quite boisterous in the hotel after getting up, and a policeman had to be called to remove her. She acted as if insane and talked in a rambling fashion.

She was taken to police headquarters and it was decided by Chief Tenny to put her on a train for Princeton. Detective Decker put her on the train, but she only went as far as Rahway, and this afternoon she was back in Elizabeth, walking aimlessly about the streets.

From her actions it is believed she is either insane or suffering from a terrible wrong which she talked about incessantly. She disappeared this afternoon as mysteriously as she had come.

LOSSES ON THE SEAS.

Life and Property Destroyed by the Gales.

Twenty Million in Two Months—Ninety Lives Lost Among the Men Who Sail the Ocean.

Philadelphia, Nov. 11.—The loss to shipping by the September and October hurricanes is estimated by marine underwriters here to have been over $20,000,000, and 90 people are known to have perished.

The loss of vessels at Martinique, where the storm first struck on the way north, was $5,000,000. Nearly every day brings news of some overdue or missing craft. Five transatlantic steamers, six barks, two brigs, and at least twenty schooners, are known to have foundered and become total losses.

Many of the coasters were abandoned off the Jersey coast and went down with their cargoes, and the only traces of them that remain are the topmasts above the surface of the sea, now being reported by in-coming craft.

Derelicts kept afloat by the buoyant nature of their cargoes almost line the coast of New Jersey, Virginia and Maryland, yet not one has been towed to any port to save the owners from total loss.

The barks Neptune, from Philadelphia, for La Guayra; Paul and Pauline, Philadelphia, for Sables Declonnes; Angelo, Philadelphia, for Palermo; Francisco, for Gloucester; Eva Lynch and Habie, New York for Australia, and Dunkerque, Cardiff, for Rio Janeiro, are missing and it is believed all went down in the recent storm.

Both air and water abound in microbes, or germs of disease, ready to infect the debilitated system. To impart that strength and vigor necessary to resist the effect of these pernicious atoms, no tonic blood-purifier equals Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

SPROAT'S LANDING.

A Typical Railroad Village on the Frontier.

A moonless night soon closed around the boat, and in the morning we were at Sproat's Landing, a place two months old. The village consisted of a tiny clutter of frame houses and tents perched on the edge of a steep bank of the Columbia. One building was the office and storehouse of the projected railroad, two others were general trading stores, one was the hotel, and the other habitations were mainly tents.

I firmly believe there never was a hotel like the hostelry there. In a general way its design was an adaptation of the plan of a hencoop. Possibly a box made of gridirons suggests more clearly the principle of its construction. It was two stories high, and contained about a baker's dozen of rooms, the main one being the bar-room, of course. After the framework had been finished, there was perhaps half enough "slab" lumber to sheathe the outside of the house, and this had been made to serve for exterior and interior walls, and the floors and ceilings besides. The consequence was that a flock of gigantic canaries might have been kept in it with propriety, but as a place of abode for human beings it compared closely with Brooklyn bridge. The queer hotel was but little more peculiar than many of the people who gathered on the single street on pay-day to spend their hard-earned money upon a great deal of illicit whisky and a few rude necessaries from the limited stock on sale in the stores. There never had been any grave disorder there, yet the floating population was as motley a collection of the riffraff of the border as one could well imagine.—Harper's for November.

"It never fails to relieve at once" is what everybody says of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup.

It's true! No humbug, you can buy Salvation Oil for only 25 cents a bottle.

A NORTHERN MYSTERY.

Smoke and Heat Issuing From the Ground.

A Hot Spot Along the Banks of the Peace River Where Clouds Roll Up to the Sky.

Ottawa, Nov. 11.—Bishop Young, of Athabasca, in a letter dated Dunvegan, September 14, reports that Albert J. Kneeland, while engaged in driving cattle last winter some 20 miles above Vermillion, on the Peace river, observed a heavy smoke arising from a place where a considerable landslide had occurred.

Being in the vicinity some months later, he noticed the smoke still rising from the ground bare of snow near the smoke.

Bishop Young and Mr. Kneeland visited the place last August and carefully examined the broken ground in the neighborhood of the landslide. They found that the smoke came from some deep fissures, and strong fumes arose. Burning paper was dropped down these fissures, but no result followed, showing that the heat and fumes arise from a source different from that of the gas springs on the Athabasca river.

Bishop Young is of the opinion that the burning is from a seam of coal which the landslide exposed. The face of the river bank in the vicinity is marked by a bluish shale, which frequently discolors the banks of the Peace river.

A Good Doctor

MOTHER—NONE BETTER. See what she has in her favor. She's on the spot, she sees the first symptoms; she has sympathy. The little sufferer is bone of her bone and flesh of her flesh. Good points, every one. Add another—the right remedy—and you have as much certainty as can be had in this world that Baby will recover. Dr. Hand has provided the remedy. In Pennsylvania, where he is best known, almost every mother will testify to this. Happy, healthy children is the evidence they offer.

A little Book, illustrated, full of sense and suggestion, will tell you more of Dr. Hand's work and his remedies. Any Mother can have the book sent to her free. Address

IN TRADING CIRCLES

Both at Our Home and Abroad.

Wheat Quotations for the Day—Price Current for Produce and Other Articles.

London wheat market weaker, prices 3 pence lower; corn steady. Liverpool wheat less demand, prices 1-2 pence lower; corn steady.

The receipts of wheat at seven principal western points to-day are 1,272,349 bu, compared with 753,668 bu on the same day last year.

Charters—Mr. T. J. Southard reports the following: Steamer Oregon and schooner Page, wheat to Buffalo, 3c.

Duluth Lake Freights—Four boats were chartered yesterday at Chicago, to take wheat from lake Superior to Buffalo at 8c a bushel. This is the first time on the lakes that boats have been sent out of Chicago without cargo in November in order to get higher grain rates from other ports.

The receipts of wheat to-day at seven principal western points are 518,681 bu in excess of the corresponding Wednesday in 1890.

The export clearances yesterday at four Atlantic ports were 166,055 bu of wheat and flour to an aggregate of 250,000 bu.

English markets as quoted herein opened lower, and less active for wheat. Corn steady.

The World's Visible Supply of Wheat.

We call attention to the tables herein giving an approximation to the visible supply of wheat in the world. The aggregate is about 180,000,000 bu., and shows a large increase in October, but it is estimated that the world's consumption in a month about corresponds to the quantity named. The significant point is made that from returns from 1,200 points in this country it is ascertained that 49.6 per cent. of the crop was marketed Nov. 1, or one-half in one-third of the year.

Russian Prohibition.

It is now contended as settled that Russia will prohibit the exportation of wheat on the 14th. Every day of its postponement lessens the importance of the edict, for the reason that navigation may soon close the Russian ports, although Odessa is frequently open a part of the winter.

As expected, English markets this morning reflected the efforts of our bear dealers yesterday, and opened lower. Dealers on this side are less disposed to load up as the close of naviagtion approaches, and higher freights are imminent. Lake freights have already advanced here 1c, Chicago 2c, and Duluth 4 1-2c. It is fair to presume that the railways will concede nothing from present rates, which gives 11.70 per bu. to New York. If wheat continues to move forward by rail there must be a readjustment of prices between the west and seaboard. On the present basis the tendency will be greater for wheat to move from the southwest to the seaboard direct.

Bradstreet's report of the visible supply makes wheat increased 3,684,000 bu, corn 116,000 bu, oats 225,000 bu. On the Pacific coast wheat increased 199,000 bu.

Dealers in wheat were generally expecting lower markets to-day, but that was no reason why it would be so. When the signal office reported a cold wave coming this way for to-morrow evening, it checked up the selling, and prices began to advance. The result has been firm and higher markets east and west. Under this influence English markets, Berlin and Paris, are reported as closing stronger and somewhat higher.

Corn has been weak throughout the day, and lower prices have been made.

In New York Nov. wheat closed at 7-8c and Dec. 3-4c higher. Nov. corn 1-4c lower.

In Chicago Dec. wheat closed 3-4c higher. Nov. corn 3-8c and Nov. oats 1-2c lower.

In Toledo business has been fairly active for this time of year. In wheat futures the transactions were higher than yesterday but there was a firmer and more confident tone in the deal. Prices have not advanced as in other markets neither was there so great a decline yesterday. On the call Dec. wheat sold at 99 3-8c to 1-2c and May at $1 06 3-8 to 5-8c closing at 1-2c. After the call Dec. sold at 99 5-8c to $1 00 3-8c and closed at 1-8c, a gain of 3-8c. February sold at $1 03 1-4. May at $1 06 5-8 and closed at $1 07, a gain of 1-2c.

Cash wheat was only moderately active and closed at a gain of 1-2c. No. 2 soft sold at 98 3-4c to 99c and closed at that. No. 3 soft at 96c to 95 1-2c; No. 4 soft at 89 1-2c. Rejected No. 1 at 90c; No. 2 at 80 1-2c; No. 2 hard at 95 1-2c; No. 3 at 89 1-2c.

Corn—No. 3 at 45,c No. 4 at 44c, No. 3 yellow at 47c. Oats—No. 2 for May at 35c, No. 2 cash about 33c. Rye was 1c to 1 1-2c cheaper; No. 2 sold early at 94 1-2c, closing at 95c; No. 3 at 91c.

Cloverseed—Prime for cash about steady at $4.70; Dec. at $4.75, Jan. highest at $4.80, Feb. at $4.85, March at $4.90, No. 2 at $4.50, rejected at $3.50.

Stocks opened active and irregular, with Erie, Atchison, St. Paul, Chicago Gas, Reading, Del. & Hud., Union Pacific and Northern Pacific the most conspicuous in the dealings. The majority of the list showed fractional declines while Erie preferred was down 1 per cent. Reading, Sugar, Chicago Gas and Del & Hud. were exceptions to the general weakness and were 3-4 to 1 1-8c per cent. higher. The market was fairly active in the first half hour but toward 11 o'clock there was some decrease in the trading and prices continued unsettled. In the hour to noon the market was dull. Union Pacific was the only stock that recorded any movement of note. Its price advanced 5-8c. At noon the market was still irregular with very little change from the opening figures. At this writing the market is dull.

SOME SPICY CURRENT TOPICS

Of Local and Neighborhood Interest.

Notes and Comments on Incidents Occurring Daily—Prepared for Readers Who are Hustled for Time.

TAKEN UNDER ADVISEMENT.

This afternoon after hearing learned and exhaustive arguments in the Wabash-Compton suit since yesterday noon, Judges Gresham and Jackson took the case under advisement, giving the counsel on either side to file extra briefs for three days. The greatest array of legal talent in their respective lines was present and participated.

PATTERNED AFTER TOLEDO.

Robert Hanna, of Fort Wayne, recently paid a visit to this city to examine the Toledo club's building, its plan of organization, etc.; and on his return home made a report to a number of gentlemen interested in the matter. As a result of the visit, Fort Wayne has now a permanent organization, and all the necessary steps have been taken for incorporation and placing it on a solid basis, with the Toledo club as its pattern.

AFTER A BURGLAR.

Deputy Sheriff Russell E. Converse, of Hillsdale, Hillsdale county, Michigan, is in the city after Theodore White, who is at present confined in the Toledo workhouse as a suspicious person. White is alleged to have burglarized a store at Hillsdale, and some of the goods found on him have been identified as goods taken from this store.

THE DORR STREET FREE RIDING.

Considerable disturbance has been manifest on the Dorr street Consolidated cars of late because the company refuses to place conductors on that line, and many of the citizens have been enjoying free transportation. No less than 15 persons rode, free of charge, this morning, and when the driver came into the car and demanded the fare from a passenger he immediately called his attention to the sign, "Passengers will please put their fare in the box. The driver is not allowed to receive or deposit it.

These citizens are probably not aware of the fact that they are violating a state law, but they well be made to realize it when several arrests have been made, which Mr. Lang is now contemplating.

A PUBLIC BENEFACTOR.

Mr. J. N. Mockett left last night for New York in search of new goods and novelties. Mr. Mockett is always at the front in supplying the latest factors which go to make up an elegantly dressed gentleman, and keeps a close eye on the clothing world for that which shall sustain the high repute of his extensive establishment. He is the pioneer merchant in his chosen line, and it is largely due to his constant and indefatigable efforts that the Toledo market is always supplied with the most recent productions in the way of gentlemen's wear. Always pushing for the best, and satisfied with nothing short of superior excellence, Mr. Mockett has established a reputation among the members of the clothing world which is second to none. By sterling integrity and strict maintenance of the most accurate business methods, he has achieved a position which warrants the assumption that his present trip to the marts of the east will afford excellent opportunity for those who find in ready-made clothing satisfaction for the most elaborate wants of a well dressed man, to provide for their wants in this line during the approaching winter.

ATTEMPTED ASSASSINATION

John Woodward Has Been Marked for Death.

He Has Been Too Vigorous in Investigating the Murder of His Daughter in July.

Binghamton, N. Y., Nov. 11.—An attempt was made Monday night to assassinate John Woodward, of Waverly, N. Y. As he was passing along a street in te suburbs of that village some one shot at him, the bullet passing through his hat. The would-be assassin escaped.

In July last the bodies of Lou Woodward, 18 years old, a daughter of Mr. Woodward, and Arthur Pierce, of Athens, Pa., were found in a piece of woods two miles east of Waverly, dead.

Their deaths could not be accounted for. Both were shot through the head, and, as no revolver could be found, foul play was suggested.

It is thought that the person who shot at Woodward had a hand in the murder of Pierce and Miss Woodward and that he is anxious to remove Woodward, who has been active in pushing the investigation. The shooting will be investigated.

STOLE HIS DIAMOND CASE.

A Careless Drummer Meets a Heavy Loss.

He Leaves $20,000 Worth of Valuables in a Car and Out to Find Them Gone When He Comes Back.

Dayton, O., Nov. 11.—One of the easiest of jewelry robberies that ever occurred took place on the C., H. & D. passenger train yesterday afternoon, when a diamond case containing diamonds and jewelry valued at 120,000 was stolen.

R. E. Kranig, a traveling salesman for Herman Keck & Co., jewelers of Cincinnati, was the loser. Mr. Kranig arrived in the city Sunday night from Celina, en route for Cincinnati, and stopped off here to see Anton Wahlrab, a customer of the house. He visited Wahlrab's store at 10 o'clock yesterday morning, remaining there until 12, when he hurried to the hotel and got his grip, containing clothing, and then went to the depot.

The train was in readiness to start when Mr. Kranig entered a car and deposited his grip on an empty seat and placed his diamond case on the floor beneath the seat. He then went to the depot lunch room and drank a cup of coffee and ate a lunch, being absent about five minutes.

On his return the grip containing his clothing was where he had placed it, but the diamond case was gone. A man and wife and their child, who sat on the opposite seat, saw no one with the case leave the train, or, in fact, nothing to excite their observance or suspicion. Other passengers told the same story.

A hurried search was made on the train, while the entire day police force, a few moments later, were on the lookout for the missing diamonds and thief. Neither have yet materialized. Kranig estimates the value of the stolen jewels, which consisted of mounted rings, pins, brooches, bracelets and other jewelry, at $20,000.

CHRISTMAS AT THE XENIA HOME

Arrangements for a Treat to the Pupils.

Capt. W. G. Alexander and wife have returned from Columbus, where they have been in attendance at the meeting of the joint committee of the Grand Army and Woman's Relief corps, who have charge of preparing the Christmas treat for the orphans in the Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans' home.

It was determined that the Grand Army would furnish each pupil with a book, and at least 900 books will be necessary. Capt. Alexander was made chairman of the purchasing committee, and Toledo's book-sellers now have an opportunity to show their hustling qualities to furnish the supplies.

CARD OF THANKS.

We desire to return thanks to those who so kindly assisted us in the death and burial of husband and father; especially the orders, S. M. A. A., and K. O. T. M.

MRS. JULIA POE and Family.

CATHOLIC KNIGHTS OF OHIO

APOPLEXY, NOT POISON.

The Sudden Death of a Colored Man

Cause Some Sensational Rumors To Be Started, Which Prove To Be Without Foundation.

A colored man named Caswell Sampson, janitor of the Colorado block, on Cherry street, between Huron and Erie streets, died very suddenly this morning about 1:30, and under very peculiar circumstances. Some of the physicians who attended him last night think that he died from the effects of poison, but it will be necessary to determine this by a post mortem examination, which the coroner intends to hold.

Sampson felt ill yesterday morning and was treated by Dr. H. L. Baker, who has an office in the Eppstein block, next to the block of which the dead man was janitor. Sampson was about the building until early in the evening, about 6 o'clock, when he was taken with convulsions, soon after losing consciousness and remaining in this state until he died at the time mentioned.

His wife states that Doctors Bodman, Ely and Claypool were called in, but could do nothing for the man. Later, Dr. Parker was called in and remained with the sufferer some time. Dr. Parker said the man was dying of poison and could do nothing to save him.

Sampson was 51 years of age and his home is at 802 Lagrange street. He is a member of Ford Post, G. A. R., and this organization will have charge of his funeral.

Dr. Baker, who has been practicing medicine for 17 years, and 12 years in this city, says that he thinks the man died from some brain trouble. "He came to my office about 10 o'clock yesterday morning," said Dr. Baker, "and complained of a severe pain in the head, also stating that while lifting something a short time before he felt something snap in the back of his head, and the pain commenced at once. I felt his pulse and found it to be very high and powerful, and told him he was a very sick man. He lay down on my lounge and I gave him some medicine to ease him, let him inhale some spirits of ammonia and hartshorn, and bathed his head wit hbay rum. In the meantime I sent to the drug store and obtained one drachm of veratrum viride. This I diluted with three drachms of water, and when he left my office I gave him some of this in a bottle and told him to take 10 drops every two hours. I gave him this to quiet his pulse and relieve the blood pressure on the brain, for I considered that he had symptoms of congestion of the brain. I also gave him some cathartic pills. I saw no more of him after he left my office. The doses I told him to take would not have harmed an infant, and even if he had taken an overdose his stomach would have thrown it up. The bottle was afterwards returned to me and it did not look as though he had taken any, surely not enough to have injured him. He did not die from the effects of any poison given him by me."

Coroner Roulet viewed the remains of the dead man this morning and investigated the case fully. He found the facts to be the same as set forth above, and does not think the man died from poison, as the doses of medicine he was taking could not kill. Some two years ago Sampson was stricken with an epileptic fit, and the coroner attributes his death to apoplexy. He is satisfied of this, and will not hold a post mortem examination as he at first intended.

TOLEDO CITIZEN HONORED

With the Presidency of the Ohio Masonic Home Board of Trustees.

The annual meeting of the board of trustees of the Ohio Masonic Home was held in Springfield yesterday, and the following officers were elected:

President—Leander Burdick, Toledo.
First Vice President—J. W. Iredell, Cincinnati.
Second Vice President—W. J. Akers, Cleveland.
Treasurer—J. W. Chamberlin, Tiffin.
Secretary—J. H. Bromwell, Cincinnati.
Building Board—J. W. Iredell, W. J. Akers, and Edward Hartford.

It is necessary to raise $100,000 before the home is started or building commenced. Over $60,000 of the amount has been already subscribed, and a strenuous effort will be made to secure the balance this year.

BLIZZARD IN THE NORTH.

Heavy Snow Storm in North Dakota.

Wind Fifty Miles An Hour and All Indications That Winter is Here in Earnest.

Minneapolis, Minn., Nov. 11.—Specials from points in North Dakota show that there is a general snow storm in the state.

Bismarck says that at 8 o'clock last night the wind was blowing 50 miles and hour and a blizzard prevailed.

Devil's Lake reports snow falling all the afternoon.

At Dickinson snow has been falling since noon yesterday and the temperature is at the freezing point.

Snow has been falling steadily at Steele since noon and at Wahpeton the rain that fell all the afternoon was followed by snow in the evening.

MEETS THURSDAY EVENING.

The New Catholic Literary and Musical Society.

There will be a meeting of the new Catholic Literary and Musical society, Thursday evening at C. A. Rowsey's, 620 Lagrange street, when the constitution and by-laws framed by the committee appointed for that purpose, will be submitted for approval and voted upon by members of the club. Officers will be elected and the work outlined.

From present indications there will be a large attendance, as there seems to be much interest and enthusiasm manifested. All those having any taste or desire for literary or musical improvement are invited.

This society is not intended for social amusement, but for intellectual enjoyment, and to bring together those Catholics who are intelligent, educated and of congenial tastes, thus forming a union which will be an advantage and a credit to themselves both as individuals and as a representative body.

PLEADED WITH ITS FATHER

Not To Go To the Villainous Rum Shops,

And Probably Lost Its Life for So Doing.

A Father Suspected of Murdering His Child—A Search Party Hunting Through the Woods for the Remains.

New Brunswick, N. J., Nov. 11.—Patrick Bagley, a vagabond, is wanted at Sayreville, this county, for the murder of his 2-year-old child.

The father and the child disappeared about three weeks ago, and yesterday the matter was reported to the police by Bagley's family, who expressed their belief that the father had taken the child into the woods and murdered it.

He had threatened to do this because the little toddler used to follow him to the door, catch hold of his coat and endeavor to prevent him going to the rum shops.

But three weeks ago the child, as usual, tried to coax him to remain at home, when the inhuman father, with an oath, picked the little one from the ground and said he would put him where he would never follow him again. He took the child into the woods.

The child never returned and neither did the father. A search party has been organized with a view of discovering the body of the child.

AMONG THE PEOPLE.

Jottings of Personal Mention About the City,

Gleaned by Members of the Bee Staff—Socials and Small Parties at Different Homes.

Miss Tracy is on the sick list.

J. M. Lowe is Mr. Roff's guest at the Madison.

Otto Holey, who has been quite ill, is convalescent.

Mr. and Mrs. Finney, of Chicago, are Mrs. M. I. Wilcox's guest.

G. S. Eggeman and family have returned from an eastern trip.

Mr. Bradford, of Monroe, Mich., visited Mr. Austin the first of the week.

Mr. James Mullen came from Buffalo to attend the Finney-Potter wedding.

Miss Elsie Raff, of Traverse City, Mich., is the guest of Mrs. A. M. Gregory.

Mr. Jeffrey and daughter, of Blissfield, were A. Austin's guests over Sunday.

The Political Equality club will hold its meeting Saturday in room 9, Ft. Industry block.

E. C. Knight has gone west for his health, and will be absent a month or six weeks.

Mrs. Wheeler is entertaining Mrs. and Miss Wheeler of Port Huron, who came to attend the Finney-Potter wedding.

Miss Lillie De Hass, of Leesville, O., and Irena Newell, of Bowerstown, O., are visiting Mrs. Seitz, of 3123 Lagrange street.

Mrs. Flo Fish, of Chicago, who has been the guest of Toledo friends for the past several weeks, will return to her home Thursday.

Messrs. George and Howard Howard, of Ypsilanti, are visiting their mother. Mr. Geo. Howard is connected with the Ypsilanti Commercial.

Thursday night Mrs. Claude Q. Murphy and Mrs. Ellen S. Fray will talk on woman's suffrage at the Lagrange Street Congregational church.

A reception will be held at the Boys' home Saturday evening, and the public is invited to call and investigate the workings of this institution.

Mr. T. T. O'Malley, of Canton, representing the Pittsburg Labor Tribune, is in the city in the interests of his paper. He paid the Bee a pleasant call.

Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Blaine, of Trumansburg, N. Y., are visiting Mrs. A. J. Blaine, of Thirteenth street, and Mrs. H. S. Blaine, of West Bancroft.

An agreeable surprise party was tendered Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Reed last evening by a number of their friends, in honor of their wedding anniversary.

Mrs. John Sherwood will remain in the city until Saturday. Mrs. Sherwood has kindly offered to give a reading for charity if any of the societies or charitable institutions desire to have her.

Rev. Mr. Morse, of Utica, N. Y., has a fine collection of paintings at Leland's art store. This is Mr. Morse's first visit to Toledo, and he is quite delighted with the city, and is convinced that the people appreciate fine art.

The Toledo Society of Economic Inquiry meets this evening at the Steadman business college. A paper will be considered from Mrs. Rosa Segur, on Taxation, Its Wrongs and Remedies. Rev. G. Candee and Miss Olive Brown will lead the discussion.

A pretty wedding took place last evening at the home of M. I. Wilcox, where, at 4 o'clock, Miss Grace Finney, a niece of Mr. M. I. Wilcox, was united to Mr. Paul Potter, of St. Paul, Minn., by Rev. Chas. Scadding, of Trinity church. The bride was attired in white satin trimmed in embroidered chiffon, a tuelle veil with diamond pendant, and diamond earrings. The maid of honor, Miss Harrington, of Port Clinton, was lovely in a pink costume. The bridesmaids were Mary Potter and Grace Harris, both attired in pink. The bride entered the parlor with her uncle and proceeded to the bay window, which had been beautifully decorated with similax and a huge lover's knot of pink and white flowers, where she was met by the groom and Rev. Chas. Scadding, and groomsman, Mr. Rol. Potter. After the ceremony, fourteen sat down to the bridal supper. The table was lovely with a huge bank of chrysanthemums for a center piece and festoons of Similax and maiden hair ferns. Suspended from the chandelier and directly over the center piece was a large ball of white chrysanthemums with the initials, F. P., of pink roses on either side. A reception was held during the evening, after which the happy couple left for an eastern trip. Mr. and Mrs. Potter will reside in St. Paul. Among the guests from abroad were: Mr. Wheeler and son of Buffalo, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Finney of Chicago, Mr. Harry Finney and Mr. Hanna of Cleveland, and Mrs. and Miss Harrington of Port Clinton. Mr. and Mrs. Paul Potter will return from their wedding trip next Monday, and in the evening Mrs. Emory D. Potter, jr., will give a reception for them.

FROM JAIL TO THE CHAMBER.

Paris, Nov. 11.—The radicals and socialists celebrated, in a disorderly way, at Lille the release from prison of Lafargue, who has been elecetd deputy from that city. Police broke up some of the turbulent meetings. It is announced that Lafargue will be re-imprisoned after his term in the chamber expires. His friends hope, however, to secure a permanent pardon.

DIED IN PRISON.

Dublin, Nov. 11.—P. W. Nally, who was connected with the Mayo or Cross Melina conspiracies in the early days of the land league, and who was sentenced at the Cork assizes in 1885 to 10 years' imprisonment for the share he had in those movements, died on Monday in Mount Joy prison, of typhoid fever.

PRESIDENT OF THE SENATE.

Valparaiso, Nov. 11.—Senor Silva has been elected president of the Chilian senate, and Senor Luci, president of the chamber of deputies. Both are members of the late insurgent junta.

STRIKE ON THE WHEELING.

There are no new developments in the switchmen's strike of the Wheeling and Lake Erie yards.

Several days ago the men made a formal demand for an increase of 10 cents on night work. President Woodford heard the demand, and in reply stated that it was paying its switchmen as much as any other line in the city, but he would make an investigation and announce his decision in the matter later on. Before he had made any conclusion known he was called away. In the meantime a switchman named Reuben Denzey was discharged. The men claim that this action was uncalled for, and refuse to go to work until Denzey is reinstated, and the increase in wages acceded. There has been no freight moving in the yards since. President Woodford arrived home last evening, and this morning had an interview with the men.

When the Bee went to press a settlement had not been arrived at, and operations in the yard were still at a standstill.

In common pleas court to-day the jury in the case of Joseph Bowers against the Pennsylvania Railway company returned a verdict for the plaintiff allowing $5,250 damages. It was an action to recover $20,000. The defendants filed a motion for a new trial.

TARIFF CASES POSTPONED.

Washington, Nov. 11.—The United States supreme court has postponed until November 30 the argument in the three cases involving the constitutionality of the McKinley tariff act and also the case in which the act which provides for the classification of the worsteds is attacked on the ground that the speaker had no right to count a quorum in passing the bill.

MURDERED IN THEIR HOME.

Alexandria, Va., Nov. 11.—Mrs. James Kines, a widow, and her three children were murdered in their house in Fauquier county yesterday, and the house was fired to conceal the crime. The bodies were badly burned before the fire could be extinguished by neighbors. There is no clue to the murderers.

TENNY IN A BAD WAY.

New York, Nov. 11.—It was currently reported at Guttenburg yesterday that the great race horse Tenny had again broken down, but investigation proves that this is not entirely true. He is in a bad way, however, and there is a possibility that he will never race again.

Bridgeport, Conn., Nov. 11.—James, William, and Robert Meachem, brothers, living in Stratford, have received word from England that by the death of another brother's widow they are heirs to an estate of $6,000,000. The widow died childless, and the fortune reverted by her husband's will to his six brothers. The whereabouts of the three brothers is unknown.

FORCE THEM OUT.

SWIFT'S SPECIFIC is a remedy which is far in advance of medical science, as it has been expelling Microbi from the blood, and curing the worst diseases for 50 years, and it is only recently that the medical world have concluded that to cure disease is to force out the baccilli through the PORES OF THE SKIN.

S.S.S. Never Fails to do this.

AN EDITOR Mr. W. C. CURTIS, Editor of the Mecklenburg News, at Boydton, Va., says that he has been entirely relieved from an abscess which formed in his throat, and caused intense pain, almost choking him. He could not swallow solid food, and was in a most painful condition. He says that he took only three bottles, and that it effected a complete cure.

A MEAN TRICK.

James Craig and Charles R. Berry, of St. Joseph, are two young men very well known in this city, says the Kansas City Times. They were both in town yesterday. Berry wore a face of gladness, while Craig's usually calm countenance bore traces of exceeding gloom. Both manifestations were due to a hat that Berry wore. It was new, and only the day before had cost Craig $5 in cold cash.

"It's all right," said Craig, "but I was worked It's all right, anyway," he went on, adjusting his glasses, "if it is a hard trick to play on a fellow. You see, Berry was in my office yesterday and I was called to the telephone. While I was talking he took off his hat and put it in my seat. Can't see very well anyhow, you know, and, bless my soul, I sat on the thing. Of coure I sent Berry across the street for a new crush."

"Yes?" half queried a friend. "But wasn't that all right?"

"Of course it was all right," said Craig, "but I learned this morning that the hat I smashed was a last year's one that he got from me on a bet."
